THE LAST SUPPER.

We do not allude to things sacred, or to the famous supper of the unfortunate Girondists, although the editorial spread in many respects resembled the latter, the number present being just half as great, and the feast being provided, not exactly by a friend of the party, but by the proceeds arising from hard work and self-denial on part of themselves. We don't know as they were actuated by any remarkable love of country upon that occasion, but all came with a strong determination to do justice to the feast. The supper of the Girondists was the last one they ever enjoyed. In this respect these latter eminent gentlemen differed. We hope, and believe they hoped, that they would enjoy many more repasts of a like nature.

But the feast in question resembled the former in the point that it was probably the last one in which they would ever meet as an editorial board; and, laying aside all restraints and conventionalities, they made the most of the occasion. As in the famous feast referred to, the one pre-eminent for his abilities presided, so upon the latter occasion the editor-in-chief sat at the head of the table and directed affairs by his sage-like wisdom.

First came the feast administering to the physical enjoyment. The display of plate was not remarkable, nor did bouquets, festoons, etc., ravish their senses and distract their appetites; but they slaughtered the viands with such remarkable zest as to clearly indicate the effect of their hard work during the year. The provisions were such as to satisfy the most fastidious epicurean palate, and not a dish was left untouched.

Then came the "feast of soul and flow of spirits." The spirits were remarkably absent. But pink lemonade, without a "stick," furnished a substitute. Toasts unlimited in number were proposed, and assigned with especial regard to the adaptability of the ones responding.

Another point of difference between the two parties above mentioned was, that the latter gentlemen made no reference to immortality, but persons, and things extremely mortal engaged their attention.

The first toast proposed was "The PHILLIPIAN." A merry ring of wine glasses followed, as they were drained of their sparkling, — pink lemonade. Mr. Trowbridge responded with a glowing description of the wonderful success of the paper, a résumé of its history, the number of copies spread broadcast over the land — of Zion's hill, and predicted a bright and glorious future for it. A hearty amen was heard, by Ladd, we think.

The glasses again came up, and the contents — pink lemonade — went down, to the toast of "The Faculty." Ladd responded in very feeling terms, and seemed much affected. He had always loved them and they had reciprocated the affection. Some misunderstandings may have happened, but he had "buried the hatchet and shaken hands across the bloody chasm."

Pink lemonade followed to the toast of "The Commons." Mr. Sharp said it was with great regret that he was now to leave these unique specimens of Grecian architecture. Many were the revels and pleasures he had experienced in their classic halls, and often had he welcomed the genial face of some member of the faculty as he "just dropped in to see if he were enjoying himself," and to be introduced to his guests, with the gratuitous remark at parting that "they had stayed long enough."

More pink lemonade, at the name of the Shawshine Club. Wilson mourned the fate of that defunct institution; for many, many days had he cherished it, in the vain hope of being cherished by it. He longed, with an intense longing, to have one of the numerous "slabs" he had swallowed, in order to mark its last resting place. Nor did there remain any of that decoction of twisted spokes of gristle, watery potatoes, and imbricated sole leather — which they called by the euphonic name of hash — to erect a tumulus over the grave. He waxed eloquent and flowery as he proceeded, until his feelings gained the mastery over him and he wept. More pink lemonade revived him, as the "Mirror" was named.

M. Brown, Jr., said he had always been a zealous defender and patron of the mirror, and it should not be monopolized by the opposite sex. Here the gentleman was informed that the periodical of that name was meant. Pink lemonade had begun to have its effect, and he declared he was too full for utterance.

"The Theologues" and the orthodox drink of pink lemonade were followed by a touching and affectionate tribute by Nickerson. The sublime pathos lavished upon these heavenly denizens of the "institution over yonder" was truly remarkable, and could only have been prompted by the kindest regard for them.

The last regular toast was "The Fem Sems." All arose from their seats and quaffed full glasses of pink lemonade to the fair ones. Then followed a neat tribute by H. Brown, full of the most gallant sentiments, which, to appreciate fully, one must have seen the speaker and heard his words. The gentleman resumed his seat amid prolonged applause.

Other toasts were responded to by the younger members of the board, with more pink lemonade. The supper concluded with three cheers for the PHILLIPIAN.

It was with not a little shade of sadness that the company at a late hour returned, each to his own room, sad at the thought that they were soon to be widely separated. Such occasions are indulged in too seldom; for the recollection of them will come up in future years to gladden the heart and lighten many a burden. Like some flowers that leave a fragrance floating in the air long after they have withered, so will the recollection of this social gathering be an aroma which shall leave a lasting remembrance of their feast — and pink lemonade.

THERE are in the Academy about an hundred new students, many of whom have left home for the first time this fall, and who, even now, are counting the days between September and Christmas, so vivid is the impression left upon their memory by the ancestral fireside. Hence, for obvious reasons, the sad fate of a Phillips student, homeward bound, has been for a time kept secret by those best acquainted with the facts, which are as follows:—

The second evening after last Commencement found a score or more of our school-fellows on board the steamer Bristol, which was making her regular trip from Fall River to New York. After supper, as the night was fine, the Phillipians, naturally enough, gathered in the stern, on one of the lower decks, some talking, some smoking, and some trying to listen to the singing of a party of young ladies from Wellesley, whose presence lent a charm to the journey. The music, however, was not as good as we are accustomed to receive at the hands of the Theologues. Altogether, with the term's work behind and the long vacation before them, our friends were disposed to enjoy themselves, gently rocked in the cradle of the Sound, and without thought of accident or sorrow. But suddenly D—, who had been acting somewhat strangely for an hour past, sprang to the rail, and in a moment all was over. His comrades raised a wild cry, which sent a chill through the hundreds scattered about the decks. The steamer was stopped, and the crowd of passengers, hurrying to the stern, watched the life-boat as it was quickly lowered and pulled away over the dark waters. Breathlessly they awaited the return. A lady on the upper deck was the only one who had seen the boy strike the water, at the end of his awful leap. The life-boat slowly returned after a fruitless search, and those on the Bristol were sad that night, as they thought of the long list of those lost beneath those very waters.

D— wasn't sea-sick when he came out of his stateroom the next morning, and, out of regard for the feelings of the new boys, we take the liberty of stating that he arrived safely home.

WE are indebted to Prof. Merrill for a list of the students' names. This will be a great convenience to any one wishing to find where any particular student lives, and will in a large measure take the place of a catalogue, which is not published until the end of the year.

WITH the present issue, the PHILIPPIAN enters upon its third volume. We can scarcely hope to fill the mantle dropped by our predecessors, but we may possibly grow somewhat. The able management and success attained by them, is more than we venture to hope for. But with the hearty co-operation of the school, we will venture to prophesy a reasonable amount of success.

The columns of the paper are open to the members of the school, and all communications relative to matters of interest will be gladly received. We wish the paper to meet the wishes of the students, and not only to express their thoughts, but give direction to them.

It seems to be the object of most papers, of whatever pretensions they may be, to follow in the wake of public opinion, whether that sentiment be for the best interests of its readers or otherwise. Instead of trying to direct the current of thought and tone of its patrons to a higher plane, they descend to the lower. If a paper is worth anything, it should instruct as well as amuse. While we make no pretensions to superior wisdom, what little we have will be used in the best interests of the paper. In the discussion of all questions that may come up, we will endeavor to be on the right side of the fence. For the present we will have no creed or politics except the right ones.

Recognizing the fact that nothing of special advantage can result from maintaining a position hostile to the faculty, we will try to keep in their good graces, and mind our own business when theirs does not conflict with ours.

With this modest avowal of our relations to the rest of mankind, and our intentions toward our fellow beings, we ask you to be sparing in your criticisms, and liberal in your patronage.

THE first Sabbath of the term was one of the days that gave additional wings to the rumor that it was meditated, on the part of the powers that be, to make attendance upon only one Sunday service obligatory. We know not whether the rumor is the offspring of the wish, but it is quite evident that such a regulation would meet with the hearty concurrence and support of the majority of the students. There are many arguments in support of such a measure. One of them is, that the devotional spirit of the average student is not materially enhanced when listening to dry metaphysical discussions, with the thermometer registering 99 to 102 degrees heavenward, in the shade. The higher the spirits of the thermometer rises, the lower falls their devotional spirits. Moreover, the hot weather exercises a remarkable soporific influence upon the visionary faculties, and they are not always in full accord with the divine themes suggested by the minister; in short, some will fall asleep in spite of their best endeavors, and many more feel like it. It would look vastly better, and be far more convenient, to be permitted to take the nap in one's room, upon a comfortable lounge or bed, without fear of having his slumbers disturbed by a gentle nudge behind the ears. Another consideration is, the fact that most of the students are hard worked during the week, and need additional time for rest. There are many, however, who would attend both services, even if it were not obligatory; many more would like the privilege of occasionally going elsewhere. We might too, point to Harvard for an illustration on this subject, if we were sure the orthodoxy of the institution would not be called in question. However, will not the faculty take our suggestions under consideration, — with the intention, to be sure, of concurring in them?

THE meetings of the debating societies, last week were very fairly attended, considering that they were the first of the term. All students who have never had the good fortune to belong to societies of their nature, cannot fully appreciate the advantages to be derived from them. He who faithfully performs the parts assigned him, reaps a benefit as great as that derived from any one study. He is brought to some extent under the influences of every day life, by taking part in, and listening to, the discussions of questions treating of public interest. Here is a means of keeping pace with the fast-flying events of to-day, of which no educated man should be ignorant. He is brought in contact with other minds, and nothing so tends to bring out the dormant faculties of man's mind as the meet in the wordy encounter of contending thoughts. His appearance before a small assembly of this kind tends to give him that self-assurance necessary when coming before a large one. Many valuable criticisms are made, which cannot help proving advantageous, if kindly suggested and received. By carefully watching the delivery of the older, or better speakers, many points will be gained, which will help the younger members of less experience. These are some of the reasons why the members of the school should avail themselves of these societies, and we hope to see them liberally supported.

THE last meeting of Inquiry was very much annoyed by some boys rapping upon the windows, and shouting in a manner to disturb all within. They paid no regard to the person occupying the floor, and clearly demonstrated that one branch of their education had been sadly neglected. We have no objection to your carrying a cane, and shouting your class, but please exercise a little discretion in the time and place of employing them.

WE are to have a lecture course this winter, on the programme of which are Prof. Churchill, Gen. John L. Swift, Thos. Hughes, (not of Phillips Academy), Rev. Alex. McKenzie, the Temple Glee Club, Prof. Raymond, assisted by H. C. Barnabee. This will undoubtedly be as good as the course of last year.

ONE of the beneficial results of the proceeds from extra examinations may be seen in the library of the academy, consisting of a handsome hard-wood table, running the entire length of the room, and about five feet broad. A set of cases have also been placed at the end of the room, next the hall. These were things much needed. Some chairs, as the next accession, would not be out of place.

A MEMBER of the Senior classical class brought to school, this term, a bottle of whiskey, to be used as a medicine, in case of necessity, and placed it upon a conspicuous shelf in his study-room. The next day he found a blue ribbon tacked to the shelf, and now he wants to know whether a total abstinence clause has been added to the landlady's bill.

THE school starts off with flattering prospects for a successful year. The number at the present time is greater than at the same time last year, by some sixteen or eighteen. All the departments are ably conducted by an efficient corps of teachers.

To an ordinary observer the rate of progress made toward the completion of the repairs about the entrance of the academy, is hardly perceptible. They are evidently going on the hare and tortoise plan, with the hare left out, and, instead, several tortoise-like workmen trying to see which can take the longest time to complete the work. When finished it will undoubtedly be a handsome job, but we fear the present generation may not see it.

WE regret to learn, upon our return, of the serious illness of Dr. Bancroft and his family during the vacation, himself and all his children having been attacked with diphtheria. All recovered with the exception of little Arthur, whose funeral occurred upon the 11th of last month. The services were conducted at the house by Prof. Park. Four members of the school acted as pall-bearers, — Manning, Hayward, Fifield and Symons. We extend our warmest sympathies to the bereaved family.

THE old boys missed the genial face of Dr. Bancroft upon their return. He has been granted an unlimited leave of absence by the trustees, for the purpose of recuperating after his sickness. His present address is Mt. Vernon, N. H., but he will soon go to New York. If possible, he will be back within six weeks. In the meantime Prof. Merrill occupies his place in the direction of affairs, and Prof. Comstock hears the Senior Latin class.

A RATHER one-sided rush took place upon the campus last Wednesday. There were some bundles, hats, etc., scattered about, and two or three coats, with mighty rents down the back. The Juniors were not out in sufficient numbers, and the Middlers carried the cane off the campus, or as many pieces of it as they could find. We noticed a tendency on the part of some to loose their temper. It may be difficult to keep an unruffled shirt-bosom upon such occasions, but with a little self-control it is possible to keep your bellicose passions under a due restraint. Have another, when you are better organized.

Roc, J. N., has charge of the gymnasium during the present year.

On the third day of the term we were gladly surprised at the appearance of "Bob" Warren and Hatch, P. A. '79, now Amherst "Sophs."

Cheak Yan Che, having wearied of Phillips, has betaken himself to the New Haven High School.

A. J. Selfridge has found a new field for his athletic abilities in Hamilton College, which he enters without condition.

Mr. Skeele, of the Middle class of the Seminary, hears the Preparatory class, in Prof. Comstock's place.

A committee consisting of Messrs. Howard, Jones and Strong, have been appointed by the school to select a foot-ball team.

Last Sabbath the pulpit remained vacant for two or three minutes after the voluntary ceased, owing to a slight tardiness on the part of the minister.

The present number of the PHILLIPIAN should have come out Saturday last. But delay was occasioned by the slowness of the Mid- dlers in electing their representatives.

At the last Sunday afternoon service only one theologian appeared in the choir. He deserves praise for remaining and carrying along the singing.

A small child furnished amusement in the chapel last Sunday for some of the younger portion of the congregation.

The proceeds of the PHILLIPIAN for last year may be seen in the stained glass window in the back end of the hall, bearing the arms of the Phillips family.

The Phillips Choir, on the 1st inst., was augmented by Nickerson, Reid, Thompson of P. S. '80, and three friends who were paying a flying visit to the scenes of their academy days before entering upon their future studies or business occupations.

Among those who climbed up Zion's hill to see how Phillips Academy progressed without the class of '80, were W. E. Wilcox, E. M. Green, H. W. Hyde, W. C. Crocker and J. B. Wilson, who was accompanied by Wm. Simmons, of P. A. '79.

Through the kindness of the many friends of the PHILLIPIAN, we are able to announce, to a limited degree, the success which attends the class of '80, in their entrance examinations at the various colleges:

At Harvard, Byrnes enters on the new system, with ten honors; on the old system, Nichols enters with mathematical honors, and Wilson with one condition; H. J. Brown, P. S. '80, takes an elective course.

At Yale, Ayres, Blodgett, Hopkins, Tuttle and Wolcott, enter with clean score; F. C. Brown enters with one and a half conditions; D. H. Wilcox, two; and Thompson, Sheffield, with one.

At Amherst, Hyde and Green enter successfully, and W. F. Wilcox, who contested for the Porter prize, enters with the second highest honors. We learn that Crocker, Fellows, Holmes and Ward, expect to take the Fall examinations. As yet they have not been heard from.

At Princeton, Harris, Moore, Egbert, Blair, and Heydrick, met with success; Kessler, P. A. '81, also enters with two conditions; Kennedy was admitted into the Princeton Scientific School.

Rev. B. M. Fullerton, of Palmer, Mass., ex- president of Philo and a member of the class of '59, addressed a few encouraging words to the members of Philo, on the evening of the 10th inst.

A vacancy was occasioned in the editorial representatives, by Ross and Selfridge failing to return this term. Jones and Weymouth were elected to fill their vacancies. Selfridge enters Hamilton.

A JUNIOR TRIES TO RIDE THE MARE, BUT BEGINS WRONG.

Of the others, Harding enters Williams; Todd, Dartmouth; Waterman, Bowdoin; Wood- bridge, the University of Vermont; Allen, Eastman's Business College; Reid, Columbia School of Mines; Yung Fo Woo, Troy Poly- technic; Sin Nam Yang, Boston Technology; Freer and Shannon, law offices; M. Brown, Jr.; Nickerson, Robinson, Strickler and Trow- bridge, some place of business.

We noticed the genial face of "Polly," — J. R. Parrott, a Yale Soph., — among the num- ber of visitors during the week.

We have failed to receive a communication from Abbott Academy up to time of going to press, but hope to have one next week.
