No. 10.

Exeter, 29; Andover, 11.

SATURDAY dawned cold and dreary, and the morning looked threatening for a game. Some degree of anxiety was felt as to who should be allowed to go to Exeter, and Dr. Bancroft's remarks in chapel were eagerly awaited. The few that were favored with white slips received our warmest expressions of condolence, but some of them were not at all deterred by the dim vision of the Faculty's wrath. The train, as was announced, started from Andover at 1.10, amid the cheers of the fellows, who were much more happy going up than on their return. The PHILLIPIAN editors laid in a special supply of paper to take down the report of the game, and the omnipresent reporter of the Lawrence Eagle was on hand, primed and cocked for the occasion. The boys were unusually quiet on the way up, and had no cause of being hilarious on the return trip, when all was hushed and silent, except the steady tramp of the class officers going their rounds.

We arrived at Exeter about two o'clock, and immediately repaired to the campus with banners flying, our hearts elated with hopes which were soon to be extinguished.

The campus was cleared promptly at 2.30, and the game immediately commenced. Andover won the toss, and chose the south side, but as the field was perfectly level, and there was neither sun nor wind, there seemed to be no particular advantage for either side. The referee called time at 2.45, and the game commenced with Home, Exeter's centre-rush, passing the ball to Wurtenburg, who rushed a short distance, and then was downed in the middle of the field. Our side gradually lost ground until the ball was forced within our twenty-five yard line, the kicking of the Exeter half-backs being too much for our team. Aldrich made a kick, and the ball went out of bounds near our twenty-five yard line.

It was then passed in to Germer, who was playing end rush at the time, and he, by a magnificent rush, carried the ball behind Exeter's goal post, scoring our first and only touch-down, from which Odlin kicked a goal. Our hopes brightened a great deal at this signal victory for our side, while the faces on the opposite side became a trifle longer, and many resorted to "Black Jack," as a means of allaying their rising fears.

But our joy was soon to be turned to grief, for by some very earnest playing on the part of the opposite side, the ball more than once came very dangerously near our goal line during the next five minutes, and it was only by the excellent kicking of the four men behind the rush line that the ball was kept back at all. Finally it was forced out of bounds, and an Exeter man got hold of it. Instead of putting the ball in play from bounds, Exeter saw fit to bring it in, and both teams lined out opposite our goal. Horne snapped the ball back to Wurtenburg, who in turn passed it to Rice, who kicked a goal from the field, making the score 6-5 in our favor.

It was now our turn to feel uneasy at such fine playing of our opponents, and it was with feverish excitement that we awaited the issue of the next ten minutes. Odlin kicked the ball out from twenty-five yard line, and followed it up, but Harding returned it before our rushers reached him, and then Andover was forced to have the ball down.

Bancroft did some fine punting about this time, but it became more and more evident as the game progressed, that Exeter was outplaying us at every point. This was more fully realized, when, not long after, Rice kicked another goal from the field, scoring ten points for Exeter to six for our side.

It was felt by all that we were doomed to defeat, and it only became a question of time how bad a defeat we should be obliged to sustain.

Odlin attempted to kick the ball out from the twenty-five yard line, but it came in contact with one of Exeter's rushers who sprang into the air as he was about to kick it.

This was followed by Wurtenburg scoring another touch-down for Exeter, through some remarkably poor playing on the part of our backs. From this touch-down it took but a short time for one of Exeter's men to kick a goal, making the score 16-6.

This seemed to bring our men to their senses, and each man felt that a responsibility rested upon his shoulders, for the ball was carried quite near our opponent's goal and kept there for some time, until Morison punted it out, and by a very fine rush by Harding it was forced down the field to within a few feet of our goal.

Shillinger at this point received some injury from an Exeter man falling on him, and was removed from the field, and Shaw took his place amid the cheers of our fellows. Our substitute immediately made himself known by bursting through the rush line, and tackling one of the half-backs before he had time to kick the ball.

The first half of the game ended with Harding making a rush and Rice kicking another goal from the field, leaving the score 21 to 6.

After an intermission of ten minutes, the teams lined up, and Harding started off with a fine rush, but was soon downed by Andover. The ball was forced to our end of the field, and held there the greater part of the time. Exeter kicked it over the goal line, and Fiske, by bad fumbling on our part, secured a touch-down. The ball was punted to a rusher, who immediately tried for another touch-down, but he was thrown by Andover. Germer, who played half-back in the last half, rushed well to the centre of the field, and the ball stayed there for some time, Germer making several fine rushes. Finally he was tackled foul by Harding who attempted to twist his neck, and the referee disqualified Harding, James taking his place.

Tracy and Bass obtained another touch-down, but failed to kick a goal. The field was getting dark and it was hard to distinguish the ball. Germer rushed to the centre of the field, where the ball stayed for some time, when he again rushed it to Exeter's twenty-five yard line.

The teams lined up within the line, and Bancroft kicked a beautiful goal from the field. After the ball was kicked out, time was called, leaving the score 29 to 11 in Exeter's favor. The campus was immediately overrun with men who bore the team off in triumph amid the shouts and din of horns.

Andover took the shortest cut for the depot, and at 5.55 we started for home, sadder and wiser men.

Exeter had a magnificent team, and even with the advantage of our own grounds, we could not have hoped to defeat them.

Harding repeatedly rushed through our whole line, and the team backed up the men who were rushing perfectly.

A special characteristic of the game throughout was the absence of any fault found with the referee's decisions, and we feel that he could not have been better.

ALFRED MUDGE & SON, PRINTERS, 24 FRANKLIN ST., BOSTON.

THE game of last Saturday was fairly won by Exeter, and was the result of hard and well-directed labor, and a determination to win. Our team played well, and we have no cause to upbraid them, as they played against a team by far their superiors in weight, and back of the rush line in skill, and undoubtedly did their best. There is no reason for discouragement, nor any cause to blush for the record of the school, as every one must suffer defeat some time, and surely Exeter has had her share, and it is about time we were taking our turn, which we seem to be in good earnest. From our recent defeats, let us learn lessons which shall aid in our future success. With the decrease of foot-ball, we would like to see the fellows take the greatest interest in base-ball, and make every effort that all the positions in the nine may be competently filled, and that Exeter may not next year show as clean a record of victories as she does this.

THOUGH the excitement in last Saturday's game ran higher than in any we have previously played, there was less squabbling over points and fighting among the men than we have seen in any game heretofore. This arose largely from the desire of each team to play a gentlemanly game, and perhaps more from the fair and impartial way in which Phillips refereed. His every decision was received with perfect readiness; and his desire to judge squarely was so evident to all, that both sides could place entire confidence in him; and if there is anything which can eradicate the element of brutality and recklessness, so liable to disgrace foot-ball, it is such impartial refereeing as we saw in the Exeter game.

THE Exonian, the morning after the game, issued a very neat, interesting, and well-written extra, which gave a fair account of the game, with a single exception, which we were sorry to see, and which would have been inexcusable, but for the excitement that naturally attends such a victory.

We refer to the line in the heading, "Odlin held by a prep." This is not only treating an opponent contemptuously, who acted in a gentlemanly manner throughout the game, but the writer is, to say the least, mistaken concerning the facts. The two men on either side of Exeter's centre rush aided him in holding Odlin, and even then he broke through several times, and by these men turning their attention to Odlin, Fleming was given an opportunity to break through a number of times, which he improved.

THE Exonian will publish in to-day's issue a letter from referee Phillips, making a correction in the score of last Saturday's game. In giving the official score, Mr. Phillips failed to take account of a touchdown made by Harding in the last half, which would make the score 33-11. We were informed of this error too late to put it in the account of the game on the first page, but think it should be mentioned, as it rightly belongs to Exeter.

THE team, as a rule, played a strong game in the rush line, but the play of our backs was inferior to that of Exeter's in both rushing and kicking, especially the latter. The rush line was much heavier than ours, but played with less skill, the centre rush being unable to snap the ball back right half the time, and several times the referee gave it to Andover on this account. Harding did wonderful work for Exeter, his rushes being the feature of the game; also Wurtenburg did excellent playing in his position of quarter-back.

For Andover, Germer played a very brilliant game, and far surpassed our expectations, doing the best work of the season, and astonishing everybody by his running and general good play. Bancroft also deserves to be mentioned as doing good work, his kicking when surrounded by a crowd being especially praiseworthy.

The rest of the team played a steady game, with few points to criticise and few to praise. The weights and ages of the players are as follows:—

Name.	Position.	Weight.	Age.

Phillipiana.

THE goal posts are still standing.

THE skating rink is likely to be an expensive luxury this season.

VERY kind of the Faculty to let us have an evening on which to celebrate.

WE were pleased to see so many of the old fellows at the Exeter game, and only wish that they could have seen us win.

THE senior Scientifics were left in the laboratory on Wednesday without a teacher. From the racket that ensued, it is needless to say that it will not happen again.

PROF. TAYLOR will preach both morning and afternoon next Sunday.

OWING to the Thanksgiving recess, there will probably be no issue next week.

LEADER of inquiry next Sunday will be W. B. Carpenter; subject, "Wise Lips."

THE seniors have been very late in beginning on their compositions, to be handed in on Monday.

Now that there are no more foot-ball games to report, we are more than ever ready to receive contributions.

Student translates ἄσιν as meaning "an ass." Prof. "No, sir. What does it mean?" Student, "Donkey." The class smiles.

THE new reading-room has now been occupied two weeks. For years we have had no settled place for the purpose, and now that we have a suitable place neatly fitted up, we hope that it will be well taken care of and not abused.

A FATHER was much surprised to see his son help himself from a plate of biscuit first and corrected him in regard to his manners. When to the utter horror of his mother, he replied: "Papa, I heard mamma say she hoped I would n't take after you, and so I didn't."

THE parts for Philo for the 11th regular meeting are as follows: Critique, Clark; Extem., Crockett; Mirror, 2d editor, Greene; S. Reading, Northrup; debate, aff., Miller; neg., Perrin. Question: Resolved, that those who create corners in grain should be punished by law.
