VOL. XIII.

PHILLIPS ACADEMY, ANDOVER, MASS., OCTOBER 22, 1890

NO. 11

Philo.

The meeting opened with President Atha in the chair. Bumstead offered prayer, and after the roll call and the reading of the minutes of the previous meeting, miscellaneous business ensued; H. Canfield receiving honorable diemission, and J. G. Bennett being admitted into the society. Conant read a hasty criticism of last meeting, after which Semple gave a humorous extempore on "The Matrimonial Experiences of Benjamin Franklin." Porter addressed the society upon "The Future of our Country," and Clark read DeWitt Talmage's Ghosts. Next came the debate, Resolved: "That Hon. J. G. Blaine's influence is now decreasing." The affirmative was led by Stone, and the negative was upheld in a carefully prepared argument by Hildreth. O. M. Clark, Woodman, and Ladd were appointed to support the affirmative; and Porter, Ames, and Bumstead the negative. The debate being thrown open to the house, Wilson, Bennett, Clark, and Lester spoke for the affirmative; and McDonald, Ladd, Moré, and Wadhams for the negative. The vote before debate was 45; affirmative 24, negative 21. After debate 31; affirmative 17, negative 14. The President gave his decision in favor of the negative. Before the appointment of parts, Moré moved that a committee on the public exhibition, consisting of the President and Thompson of '91, McLaren and Wadhams of '92, and Williams of '93, be elected. The appointment of parts followed, and Philo adjourned.

Walks about Andover.

For the benefit of those fellows interested in walking we publish the following list. All distances given are from the Academy building.

Salem street, turning to the left where the road forks, leads to Prospect Hill, the highest point of land, in a direct line, between Boston and Portland, and from the summit of which Boston Harbor and ships sailing up the coast off Salem can be seen. Distance two miles.

Passing out Main Street and taking the left hand road toward Allen Hinton's, and cutting across the fields, Sunset Rock is reached, from which Mt. Monadnock and the twin peaks of the Uncanoonuc Hills are clearly seen. Distance two miles.

Following the old railroad, over which 50 years ago the cars ran to Boston, and passing Pomp's Pond on the right (distance one mile), Ballard Vale is reached where one can hire a boat and row to the Shawsheen River Grove near Lowell Junction (distance four miles), returning to Andover by the road on the opposite side of the Shawsheen.

Crossing the Shawsheen by the Central Street bridge, and turning to the right one arrives at Indian Ridge, where once a tribe of Indians is said to have encamped. This Ridge is mentioned in the poems of Oliver Wendell Holmes. Here, also, is the Red Spring, which has recently been bought by a Lawrence man on account of its mineral properties. Distance, one and one-half miles.

Crossing the Shawsheen by the Central Street bridge, turning to the left, and taking the first road branching to the right one reaches Haggetts Pond, distance four and one-half miles. Here refreshments can be obtained and boats hired. This road pursued leads to Lowell (distance ten miles), passing Ben Butler's house on the left.

Out Salem St., taking Rose Lane to the left at Mrs. Carter's leads to Mills' Hill from which a most beautiful view can be obtained. Distance, two and one-half miles.

The Cane Rush.

The long delayed cane rush between the Middle and Junior-Middle classes took place yesterday afternoon on the campus. The Junior-Middlers assembled at about half past one and began to form about the cane, and a small party of Seniors were also on the ground to judge the rush. '92 immediately after the cheering began, commenced to assemble slowly, and only about half of the class were present when the Seniors ordered the rush to begin. These, however, rushed upon the '93 men, and were soon reinforced by the arrival of several more of the Middle class men. '92 had an advantage in the size and weight of their men, but this was more than balanced by the manner in which the "judges" ruled, which was anything but impartial. At the end of fifteen minutes the Seniors formed a ring and proceeded to count the hands. After discussing for some time they finally decided that '92 had won the rush by 15 hands to 12 for '93.

For '92, Perkins, Goetchius, and Sheffield did the best work, and for '93, Williams, Powell, and several other '91 men also did good work.

Phillips 13; Harvard '94 4.

The eleven played a fair game with the Harvard Freshmen on Saturday. The team, as a rule, lack energy, and do not work together. Woodruff still has an aversion to running in, and all the team tackle high.

The game. Andover took the ball and the north goal, and began the game, making eight yards with the V. Knapp and Ogilvie push well at the centre, and gain fifteen yards. Then Woodruff and Babbitt, do steady work at the centre, and add eight yards more. Harvard is offside, and Andover gets five yards. The ball is now on the 3-yard line, and Andover is unable to get through the centre, so Harvard gets the ball on four downs. McNear punts, and Andover gets the ball. Knapp tries at a goal from the field, but fails. At the 25-yard line Harvard gains a little at the centre, but Hinkey makes a beautiful tackle, and Harvard is forced to punt to Knapp. Knapp returns the punt, but Harvard looses the ball on a fumble. Harvard tackles well, and prevents the backs from gaining, so Knapp punts to McNear. McNear makes a good rush, but is tackled by Sheffield. Harvard is offside and the ball goes to Andover. Knapp makes a gain of ten yards around the right end, and Goetchius follows with a beautiful rush through the centre. The ball is now near the 25-yard line, and Knapp kicks a goal from the field. Score, 5 to 0. Harvard lines up at the centre and gains ten yards. Colt and Hinkey tackle well, and Harvard looses the ball on four downs. Knapp punts, and Woodruff gets the ball. Knapp punts again, and this time Harvard keeps the ball. They loose it again on offside play. Knapp and Woodruff make a gain through the centre, and Andover gradually forces the ball to Harvard's goal line, and Woodruff carries it over. Knapp fails to kick the goal. Score, 9 to 0. Harvard tries the V at the 25-yard line, and gains five yards, but they are unable to keep on side, and the ball goes to Andover. Babbitt carries the ball to the 25-yard line, and Knapp tries at a goal, but fails. McNear and Knapp punt to each other, and Harvard keeps the ball. Gage makes a good rush of thirty yards, and is tackled by Babbitt. McNear punts to Woodruff, who makes a good rush of twenty-five yards just as time is called. Score, 9 to 0.

Harvard gained two yards on the kick off of the second half. McNear made an elegant rush of twenty-five yards, but he ran against Hinkey and stopped. Gardner gains fifteen yards around the right end. Hinkey blocks all the gain around his end, and McNear punts to Knapp, who returns the punt, and Andover gets the ball. Knapp punts again, and Harvard gets the ball. They loose it immediately on four downs. At this stage of the game Townsend is substituted for Colt. Babbitt, with the assistance of both teams, makes twenty yards through the centre. Babbitt and Woodruff loose ground, and Knapp punts. Andover is offside, and Harvard gets five yards. Gage makes fifteen yards, but Harvard looses the ball through the good tackling of Townsend. Woodruff and Knapp rush the ball well through the centre, but loose it on a fumble. McNear punts, and Hinkey gets the ball. Knapp makes ten yards at the centre, and adds five more to it on the next rush. Ogilvie makes an elegant rush through the centre, and brings the ball to the 5-yard line. Knapp carries it over on the next down, but fails to kick the goal. Score, 13 to 0. At the 25-yard line Harvard does not gain, so McNear punts and gets the ball again, by the careless work of Andover. Harvard's backs now do great work, and force the ball down the field. The Andover rush line work at this point is miserable, and the backs get through easily. From the 35-yard line McNear made a fine rush, and scored Harvard's only point, as no goal was kicked. Score 13 to 4. Sheffield rushes five yards with the V. Knapp punts, and Hinkey gets the ball. The ball goes to Harvard on account of Andover's slow work on the next play. Harvard makes no gain at the centre, and the ball is on the 35-yard line when time is called to allow the Freshmen team to catch the train.

THE ANDOVER PRESS, PRINTERS.

I would like to call the attention of the fellows to the communication concerning the school's presenting the winner of the singles in the tennis tournament at Exeter with some slight token expressive of our appreciation of his efforts. We commend the idea as a good one, and worthy of the consideration of every fellow in school; especially so when we remember that the cup is not held by the winner, but placed in the trophy case as the property of the school; also, that as there is no demand worthy of mention upon the finances of the school to train men for such a contest. It seems to us that the fellows might look upon such an act as a privilege. The idea is not of recompense or reward, but simply that of a souvenir; we have the cup to ever remind us of the victory, why should not the one who brought us the victory have something to remind him of it also. We hope that the fellows will come up to the spirit of the communication, and take speedy steps toward making it a reality.

The game with the Harvard Freshmen last Saturday was, on the whole, a very fair game and showed a marked improvement over all previous ones in the matter of fumbling the ball, but there were several defects which were brought out very plainly. The first and most conspicuous of these was that, with the exception of perhaps two men, the team tackles high. This is a very bad fault, for the only way you can tackle or even get near a good half-back is by tackling low. If a player runs to tackle a rusher and keeps his head and shoulders up he is almost sure to get pushed off and lose his man. The second fault brought out conspicuously was that the team does not play as hard after they think that they have won the game as they did before. Now football is a very uncertain game and every fellow should be on the alert every minute until time has been called. These are by no means all the deficiencies, and we would warn the team that there remain only two weeks and a half more in which to correct their shortcomings. Now that the team have gone to the training table, the school will expect to see a much better exhibition of football than in the previous games.

A New Instructor.

On account of the unusual number of students this year, the number of our faculty has been increased to thirteen by the addition of Mr. Charles Emerson Stone, Ph.B., who has been appointed a teacher in the Academy. Mr. Stone graduated at the Sheffield Scientific School of Yale University in 1889 and spent the following year as a post-graduate student. He has had a year's experience in teaching, and distinguished himself in college by excellence in English and Natural History.

The Tournament at Exeter.

Some days ago our boys went up
To play at Exeter for the cup,
The tennis championship.
They left upon an early trip.
The day was fair, no sign of rain.
It was a pleasant trip.

For us played Gimlet, famed from far,
And Chase, in singles, was their star,
The centre of their hopes.
They played and rested, played again,
And cheers for marv'lous playing then
Were heard around the ropes.

To Exeter the first game went,
As Chase on winning seemed intent.
His purpose was well met,
For Gimlet quickly took a brace,
And won the next six games with grace,
Thus giving us the set.

The next, six-love. Gim. beat him sore,
Though Chase, still hopeful, tried to score.
No use, his sun had set.
The next, six-two. This score did show

To poor young Chase his cake was dough,
He was not in it yet.

When Mills and Spaulding played their part
And lost, we took it not to heart.
We know they did not shirk.
We know for us they played their best,
And for their effort they'll be blest.
We thank them for their work.

Communication.

Editors of Phillipian:

The enthusiasm displayed
by all of the fellows last Wednesday night, in escorting Anderson from the depot to his home, showed that we were all proud of the work he did at Exeter. Now, couldn't there be a still more pleasant way to show our appreciation of his success. Such as by presenting him with some small token which would ever be a reminder of the school's hearty co-operation with him in his successful effort to add one more to the list of our victories.
