Communication.

Editors of Phillipian:

A short time ago you called attention to vacancies on the editorial staff, and desired candidates for the same. I supposed that you wished every fellow to try, and with that view of your invitation I have been writing. Lately I have heard the board criticised in regard to its action on names which come before it. Now, will you kindly state if a fellow must belong to a certain clique, organization, or class, before his hopes of obtaining an editorship are feasible. X-Y.

P.A. vs. Bowdoin.

A little after 12, M., on Thursday last the team which represented Andover against Bowdoin arrived in Portland. At Exeter, Dover, and several other places the fellows assembled on the platforms of the depots, and gave two or three good strong cheers. After a good dinner the men dressed and were driven out to the grounds, where, after a few minutes of passing and falling upon the ball, the game was called by Mr. Merrill of Dartmouth as referee, and Mr. Smith of Andover as umpire. In the toss up Andover wins, and chooses the ball. Starting with a V, a gain of six yards is made. Owing to the strong rush line work of Bowdoin, however, the pigskin is soon lost on four downs. The advantage of weight is very perceptibly with Bowdoin, and the ball is gradually pushed towards our goal. After several losses and gains on both sides, E. Hilton secures the ball and with a fine run of thirty yards scores the first touchdown, from which Downs kicks a goal. Score, Bowdoin 6, Andover 0. Both sides are now playing better, with the ball for the most part in the centre of the field. The ball is soon lost to Bowdoin for offside play, and in a few moments W. Hilton scores another touchdown, Downs kicking a goal. A brilliant run by Hinkey brings the ball dangerously near goal when time is called. Score; Bowdoin 12, Andover 0.

Both sides did their best to score in the last half, but without success; Andover's rush line work during this half was the feature of the game, time and again Bowdoin's heavy men would dive into the line only to find every hole closed. In looking over the work of each individual man, it can hardly be said that any particular one excelled, each one trying his best for the success of the team, while the team work, considering the lack of practice together, was very good.

After the game both teams returned to the hotel, where supper was served. Leaving Portland at 7 o'clock the boat arrived in Boston next morning about 4 o'clock, and after breakfasting at the United States, most of the men arrived in Andover about noon.

Commenting on the game the Boston Globe says: "Although the Andover boys were inferior in weight and were defeated by the score of 12 to 0, yet they were far superior to Bowdoin in skill."

Too much thanks cannot be given the Bowdoin management for their generous and hospitable treatment. Following are the men and their positions:

| BOWDOIN                                                                                                                   |                | PHILLIPS.                                                                                                           |  |

Philo.

Returning from their Thanksgiving vacation, the Society met, and was called to order by President Atha, who requested Wadhams to open the meeting with prayer. The roll having been called, and the minutes of the previous meeting having been read, the following miscellaneous business took place. Madocs was admitted into the society, and Porter, after explaining an amendment which he wished to make in the constitution of the Society, laid the following on the table to be discussed in two weeks, and at that time to be voted upon: Resolved: That article III, § g, of the constitution be so changed as to read thus: "Decisions of the society on weight of argument and of the president on the merits of the leading disputants." Also, Article XV, substitute Roberts Rules of Order for Cushing's Law and Practice of Legislative Assemblies.

When miscellaneous business had been finished H. B. Foster, '92, read an amusing critique of the previous meeting, but greatly marred the effect by his manner of reading. As both Phinney and Hyde were absent and had failed to provide substitutes, Wild next declaimed "The Musicians." After the ballot box had been handed to take the vote upon the merits of the question, Resolved: That the influence of the stage upon the national character is very injurious, McDonald, substitute for Kitchel, opened the debate on the affirmative by declaring that the stage had the tendency to degenerate public morals. O. M. Clark, on the negative, was very brief, simply upholding that men needed amusement. McClellan was the first assistant appointed by the chair on the affirmative, and did much for his side. The nucleus of argument was that it is better not to take any amusement than that which is degrading. Wilkin-son followed on the negative bringing up the characters of such actors as Booth and Jefferson. There were also appointed by the chair to speak upon the affirmative, Nettleton and L. H. Porter; on the negative, S. H. Porter and Bennett, the latter speaking well. There spoke from the house on the affirmative McClellan, who brought forward several good points, the strongest of which was that every man that attends a low theatre has as good a vote as a citizen as he who hears Shakespear, and that the former and his vote were degraded by the low play. Foster spoke on the negative, and McDonald closed the arguments for the affirmative by reviewing the points that had been brought out on his side. On the other hand Clark, on the negative, announced that the benefits of the stage were educational, and it was also a necessary place of relief from business whirl. Then he showed the natural tendency of the stage to elevate the different spheres of society, touching, also, upon the great influence of the drama, bringing up Uncle Tom's Cabin as an example. The vote of the house before debate was 20; affirmative 11, negative 9. After debate, 13; affirmative 5, negative 8. The president, before giving his decision in favor of the negative, said that the debate had been lively and interesting, but greatly disturbed by the whispering throughout the house, and he hoped that no further remarks on that subject would be necessary.

Harvard '94 14; Yale '94 4.

Harvard gained another victory over Yale last Saturday by her Freshmen defeating the Yale team. The game, however, was much closer than was anticipated, and was only won after the hardest kind of work. The Harvard boys had five Varsity players, while Yale had but two. Andover was represented by Stone, who played full-back for Harvard, Bliss and McCormick, half-backs, and Cochran, end, on Yale. Yale had the wind at her back in the first half, and her men played like tigers. The ball kept moving back and forth, Yale frequently getting it for interference or holding, until towards the end of the first half Harvard pushed it up to Yale's 30-yard line, where Yale secured it. The ball was then passed to Laurie Bliss, who tucked it under his arm, and started down the field, rushing through the whole Harvard eleven and covering a distance of seventy-five yards before he was downed. Newell tackled him so hard that his head was badly hurt, but he continued playing. Captain McCormick then took the ball, and with the help of the whole team forced the ball over the line just as time was called. Bliss was unable to kick a goal.

Harvard opened the second half with a spirit that meant victory, but it was only after the hardest kind of rushing that Corbett was able to get a touchdown. In the try for goal Van Huyck foolishly prevented the ball from going over the line, and Yale had to have the ball down on the 4-yard line. Failing to advance, Noyes had to kick for Yale, and soon after Harvard scored another touchdown, and Corbett kicked a goal, making the score 6 to 4. When the ball was taken to the middle of the field, Bliss, unable to play longer, retired amid cheers for his brilliant playing. Henry took his place and did good work. Once more Harvard forced the ball over the line, and then time was called, owing to darkness, leaving the score 12 to 4.

Corbett, Newell, and Shea played a brilliant game for Harvard, and Stone also did well, making one fine rush of twenty-five yards. Bliss played a wonderful game for Yale. His tackling was superb, and this Harvard often found out to her sorrow. McCormick and Cochran played a steady but not a brilliant game. The Yale team excelled in team work, but the Harvard rush line which was even heavier than the Varsity, was too much for Yale, and thus won the game.

The Phillippian will be issued every Wednesday and Saturday during the school year except in vacation.

All communications must be accompanied by the writer's full name and address, not necessarily for publication unless so desired.

Communications may be addressed to the Phillippian, Andover, Mass., or dropped in the Phillippian box placed in the main hall of the Academy building.

The editors do not hold themselves responsible for the opinions of any correspondent.

PHILLIPPIAN-Board meeting is held Wednesday and Saturday noons.

THE ANDOVER PRESS, PRINTERS

We hope that the fellows will find time this afternoon to attend the meeting in the South Church. The service is held by the Hampton Normal and Agricultural institute, in behalf of Negro and Indian Education, and, doubtless will prove interesting and entertaining. The Hampton Quartette will sing.

The communication by X. Y. which appears in this issue would call for little notice if we were considering the opinion of men acquainted with our present school life, and who were unprejudiced by reports of what has occurred in the days of long ago. But even if there is only one in our midst who has the inquiry of X. Y., we gladly give the space to eradicate any such opinion.

There have been years, perhaps, when organizations or cliques endeavored to control the school paper and school life, and manage the same to suit their ends, but the present constitution of the PHILLIPPIAN was formed to defeat this idea. No matter how large any society's representation is, it only has two votes, if it has two members on the staff, or otherwise, one or none. We firmly believe that the PHILLIPPIAN was never so unbiased in its choice of candidates as it is today. We believe that each society should have and ought to have its representative on the board, provided such a one is worthy of the position by his literary merits. In this spirit, therefore, each member of those organizations which are countenanced by the Faculty is accepted.

In regard to class-preference, there is none. All classes have the right of representation upon the same conditions as above.

It is now, and has always been, the policy of the PHILLIPPIAN to be unhampered by any clique, society, or private consideration, free to discuss all matters of school life from an impartial standpoint. A paper which will give the news as found, not as it is garbled to further this or that scheme; that will owe no allegiance to any faction, but will present news and advocate measures which we believe will benefit the school life. In this, latter purpose, it will freely advocate that which it believes to be right, and as freely condemn that which it believes to be wrong or hurtful to the interests of our Academic life; that, on whomsoever censure may fall it will treat all with fairness and justice; one, the tone and utterances of which will give no uncertain sound in a cause of right, but will carry confidence and weight with them on all occasions.

This ideal state of perfection may not be reached, we know it is not, but we are honestly striving to attain it. While we cater to no clique, or organization, nevertheless, we recognize all with equal impartiality. It may be true that this independent and honest aim may cause misunderstanding for the time, but we believe that every fellow in school will feel that a paper of this spirit needs his interest and attention, and should have the same. The PHILLIPPIAN should receive as much time from the school at large as Philo, Inquiry, Y.M.C.A., etc. We welcome all contributions of school interest.

Thanksgiving Day in Commons.

Over two score of fellows remained here during vacation. Those in Commons were well entertained by Maj. Marland, and an elegant dinner they received. It began at 1 o'clock, and for over an hour a merciless attack was waged against turkey and other good things. Finally, when a cessation of hostilities became a physical necessity, Moré, '92, as toastmaster, called for order, and followed with one of his characteristic speeches, giving the history of the day. The following toasts, Commons Dining Hall, Phillips Academy, Philo, Andover, and Inquiry, were responded to by H. G. Brown, Rogers, and Williams, '93, Phillips, and McClellan, '94, respectively. The Rev. Dr. Montgomery was then called upon and responded with the wittiest speech of the day. For half an hour the "feast of wit" continued, when all closed with three ringing cheers for the Marland House.

If you wish to purchase a neat fitting winter suit or an overcoat call at P. J. Hannons, where you can always find the best qualities of stylish woollens at prices which will compare favorably with those of any first-class tailor.
