Natural History Society.

The twentieth regular meeting of the Natural History Society was called to order Saturday by vice-President Greene. After deciding to petition the faculty to allow these meetings to be held every week instead of once in two weeks, as formerly, a motion was passed to the effect that hereafter the meetings be closed to outside reporters. The programme was then commenced by Mr. Greene, who spoke on "Birds nesting around Andover." His talk was very instructive, as also were the specimens which he exhibited. E. M. Wilder's paper on the "Bluejay" was interesting and well written. Mr. Whitfield then concluded the meeting with an essay on "Cats," which gave rise to an entertaining conversation concerning some of the habits and tricks of this animal.

Latin Commons, 10; English Commons, 6.

The final game to decide the championship of the street and house teams was played on the campus Saturday afternoon, with the above result. The game was called at 2.30, L.C. having the south goal and the ball. Hedges makes ten yards, assisted by the V. Effective rushing by the Latin backs carries the ball to E.C.'s 2-yard line. Cutler then takes it over by a rush around the right end. No goal. At the 25-yard line E.C. gains ten yards on the V, but the ball is soon lost on four downs. L.C. fails to advance and Phinney for English makes a good run of twenty yards around the right end. Phinney soon kicks. Hedges muffs, but L.C. gets the ball on interference. Johnson, Hazard, Cutler, and Hedges advance the ball thirty yards by bucking the centre. E.C. here gets the ball on her 35-yard line for offside play. Phinney makes fifteen yards, but time is called with the ball in the centre of the field.

In the second half E.C. makes seven yards on the wedge. Phinney follows with thirty yards around the right end. He then advances it fifteen yards more in several rushes, but L.C. gets the ball on four downs at her 5-yard line. Fine rushes by Cutler, Hazard, and Hedges carry the ball to E.C.'s 10-yard line, where they are temporarily checked, but Cutler soon makes a touchdown. Hedges kicks goal. Score, 10-0.

At the centre of the field E.C.

works the wedge for four yards. The ball then changes hands several times, but E.C. at last has it on her opponents' 20-yard line. Phinney carries it over by a fine rush around the end. Phinney kicks goal. Score 10-6. L.C. makes good gains at the centre of the field, but time is soon called, and the championship is decided.

The honors for Latin Commons were carried off by the three backs. For E.C., Phinney did fine work, but he was used entirely too much. The game was refereed by S. M. Allen, and umpired by Colgate. After the game the L.C. team assembled in front of the Office to have their pictures taken.

The teams lined up as follows:

LATIN COMMONS.		ENGLISH COMMONS.
Clark,	} Rushers	Jernegan,	} Fales.
Duffy,		Fuller,
Quinby,		Morrow,
Phillip,		Holt,
Berwick,		Lewis,
Allen,		Trask,
Cowdery,		Hazen.
Johnson,	Quarter-backs.
Cutler,	} Half-backs.	Branch,	} Moody.
Hazard,
Hedges,	Full-backs.	Phinney.

Princeton and Yale.

A short comparison of the two teams that will meet on Manhattan Field tomorrow will perhaps be of interest. The teams will probably line up as follows: Yale team with weight of each.—Rushers, Hinkey, 146; Winter, 174; Heffelfinger, 200; Stillman, 190; Morison, 184; Wallis, 172; Hartwell, 170; quarter, Barbour, 148; halves, L. Bliss, 150; McClung, 155; full, McCormick, 149. Princeton—Rushers, Warren, 152; Harold, 172 1-2; Riggs, 189 1-2; Symmes, 201; Wheeler, 188; Holly, 180; Vincent, 175; quarter, King, 154; halves, Flint, 178 1-2; Poe, 140; full, Homans, 150 1-2.

In the rush line the average is 176 1-2 for both teams, the centre having 192 as an average. Princeton's average for the whole team is 169 1-2 pounds, and Yale's is 167. As to Princeton's mode of play but little can be said, as her team is now practising in private. It is said that Princeton has been playing sluggishly lately and has lacked the snap which will be necessary if she wishes to meet Yale on an equal footing. Princeton has an advantage over Yale in her centre rush, as Symmes is heavier than Stillman, and has played for several years on the team. He has been developed into a good centre. At guards

Yale has two veterans, and it is on them she depends for her strength at centre. On the ends both teams are well matched, as also in the tackles. In backs Princeton is much like Harvard, having a good kicker, buckler, and dodger. Most of the team tackle well, but some are inclined to tackle high. Yale, as was shown in the Harvard game, is very good in this respect.

It is said that Princeton is almost perfect in defensive play, while Yale, although better than Harvard, is not very strong in her defence. Princeton has a good kicker, but unless she can block the Yale men and give him a chance, she will not gain much by this. The interference of both teams is good, and the backs follow their interference well. Princeton will be able to gain more around the end than through the centre, and as Yale has no bucking half-back this year, she will probably work the ends too, mostly. Neither team fumbles much, and, on the whole, the teams are very evenly matched. A close game is expected, and it is very hard to name the winner, as neither team has been scored against so far, and both have been well coached.

People's Course.

It is doubtful if a more practical and helpful address has ever been given in Andover than Pres. Gates' lecture last Monday night on "A Young Man's Fortune." The speaker's remarks were pointed and well given, and their substance is as follows:

When a young man comes into the possession of a fortune the natural question raised by all his acquaintances is "What will he do with it?" The same question should be asked concerning a young man's youth, and with much better reason, for the greatest fortune a young man has is his youth. A sort of potential energy exists in young men simply because they are young, for their youth gives them the power to do countless things, both strong and beautiful. As men grow old they are inclined to lose sympathy with younger men, and more than that to lose confidence in themselves. How often a father says to his son, "Enjoy yourself all you can, these are the happiest days of your life; you will never enjoy life as much as you do now." Wrong, all wrong.

Every added year of life gives fuller and richer enjoyment to those who live rightly. Each period of life is best for those who are in it.

All will admit, a young man's fortune is not in wealth or social position, however desirable these may be. The consciousness that an immense fortune will some day fall into his hands tends very little to improve any fellow, either in mind or morals. The influences that are at work upon a poor young man are likely to have the same effect upon him as the walls of a cannon have upon the shot, to send it straight home. No young man has or ever will find a fortune in mere beauty of face or elegance of manner. Both these are useless unless a character shines through them. Nor does a young man's fortune lie in his physique.— This brings up the subject of athletics. They are not only good, but necessary. But keep them in their place and give them their value. You will find that it is mind, will, soul, and spirit that count in life, not brawn.

How many men there are who say, "I know what a young man's fortune is. It is business ability." This may be the cause of temporal success, a success obtained by embracing every chance to make money or gain power. But in reality a young man's fortune comes solely from his power to discern to what he wishes to attain in life. This power does not exist in knowledge, for knowledge is not a living, active force, it is a skeleton, a vehicle by which we accomplish something. Neither does sentiment give this power, for all the sentiment in the world is outweighed by one good action. But it does have its foundation in the will. The young man who has no will power, nor strives to have one, is useless, and despite the talk about heredity the will can be cultivated. The three roots of manliness are knowledge, will, and obedience. Huxley says that the object of education is to do what you know you ought to do, whether you want to do it or not. So we should fashion our lives after a certain plan. We should not allow the building of a character to go on at hap-hazard, without a plan or ideal, when in grandeur it should surpass any cathedral of the world. Although we are commanded to trust ourselves, yet peace in the heart and forgiveness of sin cannot come from us alone. For those we must look higher. So serve and trust in God, and you will have your fortune secure.

The next issue of the PHILLIPIAN will be published a week from to-day.

The action of the faculty in prolonging the recess from 4 o'clock to 7.30 P.M., on Friday, commends itself to every student, and there is no way in which every fellow can show his appreciation of this consideration on their part so well as to be promptly on hand to report at the specified time.

Once more the time has rolled round, when, according to the good old New England custom, a busy nation pauses to offer thanks to Providence for the peace and prosperity of another year. While there is no reason for complaint because of any national calamity, such as war, pestilence, or famine, let us also hope that there is reason for thanksgiving because of advancement along all lines that lead to a higher state of civilization, and to a higher plane of moral character as a nation.

It is very fitting that we too, at this time, should look to see what there is for what we as a school ought to be thankful. We find indications of prosperity in many directions, such as increased enrollment, enlarged facilities in view for accommodating all who come with both room and instruction. Advancement has also been made in the spiritual, literary, and athletic life of the school, and especially in the latter has the true spirit with which athletic sports should be conducted been growing more apparent. As individual members of the school, we shall have greater cause for thanksgiving if we have come to a full realization of what we are here for. Our time here will prove invaluable to us in future life only by using it in such a way as will develop us spiritually, mentally, physically, and morally. This can be accomplished only by our own efforts, influenced, also, by a higher power, by strict attention to the duties of the hour, by forming associations that will give us strength of character and of mind; by preservation of all that is noble in our individuality, and by letting our relations, one to another, be based upon honesty and uprightness. It is only such a life that is worth the living, and only such that will make the world better for having been lived. If our efforts are bent in these directions, no one will have occasion to say that we have lived in vain.

Lecture.

A small but appreciative audience listened to the lecture, "Concord, Mass., its Men and its Women," delivered by Mrs. Annie Sawyer Downs, in Abbot Academy Hall, last Friday evening.

Mrs. Downs was introduced by Prof. Taylor of the Seminary, who said that the lecturer needed no introduction to an Andover audience, as her ability as such is well known. After dwelling at some length upon the way in which the town was founded, the peaceful manner in which the land was acquired, the friendly relations existing between the inhabitants and their neighbors, the Indians, Mrs. Downs showed what made the town a centre of literary note. She said, that Concord was a town of agricultural tendencies, where simplicity in every respect prevailed; that it was a town which believed in being a centre of education for its own children and in instructing them according to its own ideas of what thorough education is; that it was a reading community, having a circulating library in 1646, and that a social club, which now exists, of 25 of the most influential citizens met as many times a year for the discussion of current questions and subjects read. These characteristics, she said, together with the fact that Concord was slow and steady in growth of character, made it a fit residence for poets. After paying a worthy tribute to the loyalty of Concord citizens to their adopted country at the time of the Revolution, she turned to the main part of her lecture, and during the remainder of the evening held the close attention of all, as she pictured scenes in the lives of Concord's famous men and women. Her descriptions of Mr. Emerson, Mr. Hawthorne, the Alcott family, Henry Thoreau, Miss Fuller, the Channing family, Mr. Hunt, Dr. Ripley, and Mr. Pratt, were all the more interesting as they were enlivened by many personal reminiscences.

YALE AND ANDOVER.

There is a ring of victory in these names. What pleasure the present and past members of these great institutions take in their great victories this fall. It is presumable that the best team won in each game. At all events, to Yale and Andover belong the laurels. Do not forget amid all your rejoicing that Hannon is right after business, and is offering great inducements to the Phillips trade. He has attracted the patronage of the students by attending strictly to business, by giving them a thoroughly made, stylish, and durable garment at a low price, and by treating every customer exactly alike. These are the principles on which he does business.

Yale vs. Harvard.

Springfield was the scene of one of the most interesting foot-ball games
ever played in this country, when Yale defeated Harvard last Saturday by 10 to 0. Harvard's men were much heavier, and they were supposed to be much superior to their opponents in all points except the centre, but Yale showed unexpected strength on the ends, and her backs thoroughly outplayed Harvard's. But the principal cause of the latter's defeat was her utter lack of team work, in which the New Haven players excelled.

Yale had the ball at the beginning of the game, and after some short gains McClung made a brilliant run of 40 yards, being aided by excellent interference, and was finally downed by Trafford. A touchdown was made for Yale by Morison four minutes from the beginning of the game, but no goal was kicked. Neither side scored again in the first half, but the ball was in Harvard's territory most of the time. In the first part of the second half Harvard made some good gains,
but Yale still managed to force her rival to keep on the defensive. Near the end of this half, when Harvard had the ball at her 40-yard line, Corbett was sent around Yale's left end,
but was tackled so hard by Hinkey
that he lost the ball. Bliss quickly picked it up, and by good interference
succeeded in scoring another touchdown, from which McClung kicked a goal. When the ball was again put in play the crimson players worked desperately, and forced Yale back to her 10-yard line. After three downs Trafford tried for a goal from the field, but Yale stopped the kick. Harvard, however, succeeded in getting the ball, and Captain Trafford made another attempt at a goal, but failed.

Time was called soon after this with the ball on Harvard's 25-yard line.

To the Students.

The improvement in the laundry service has gone into effect. The Broadway Steam Laundry of Lawrence is doing general washing and mending, both in the most finished and satisfactory manner, at the rate of 60 cents a dozen.

It is to be noticed THAT THIS RATE AP-PLIES REGARDLESS OF THE NUMBER OF PIECES SENT. All general washing should be accompanied by a WHITE list; all starched goods by a BLUE list.

We have made this change at the request of a large number of the students,
and trust that it will meet with the approval of all our customers. For further information and upon any cause for complaint please consult our agent.
