Geology Lecture.

Dr. Harris delivered his third lecture in the geology course at Abbot Academy Monday evening. His subject was, "The Geological Work of Ice."

He first explained how glaciers are formed. In lofty mountains like the Alps whose summits are above the snow line, and in a cold climate like that of Greenland, there is a constant accumulation of snow. As this slowly slides down the steep slopes of the mountain it is pressed harder and harder by the accumulating mass behind it until it becomes ice, just as a snow-ball does when squeezed tightly in one's hand. This mass of ice is then pushed out and down over the mountains into the valleys where it melts, or to the sea where its course is stopped.

The lecturer then described the geological effects produced by glaciers. The stones and earth along the sides of its bed or channel are worn or torn away and carried along with the movement of the glacier until a line of this drift extends on each side along its whole length. A great deal of the drift falls to the bottom through the great cracks which are made in its tortuous progress. But much of it is also carried to the terminus. There, of course, it is left as the glacier melts, and gradually forms a huge heap like the delta of a river. Thus the old bed of glacier may be known by the long serpent-like ridge formed by the material falling through the cracks to the bottom all along its course and the wide-spread terminal morain, as the deposit of drift that marks the limit of the glacier is called. Indian Ridge is formed in just this way, and was doubtless formed by a glacier.

Agassiz was the first to advance the theory that glaciers were once common to New England. He was at first laughed at, but now this belief is well-nigh universal, and to the work of the glaciers is doubtless due the rough, rocky nature of the country.

Preliminary Tournament.

The preliminary tournament passed off successfully Saturday before an attendance much larger than the one last year. Some of the events were close, but the science of sparring seemed to have few followers among the contestants. An evident lack of training or an excess of training destroyed the interest in much of the boxing, for few of the men showed much strength after the first round and a half.

The first bout between Bucknell and Lapham was tame, Bucknell evidently being indisposed.

The feather weights did the best sparring, the first bout being won by Mann '94 against Whitford '94 in 3 rounds; the second by Mann against Sargent '95. In this bout Mann showed much skill and won his event by clever sparring, although Sargent was very quick and hit the hardest blows.

The rival contestants in the light weight wrestling were: D. C. Mills '95, J. M. Abbott '94, and W. T. Laing '95. Mills was thrown by Abbott in two straight falls, after which Laing threw him two out of three. Abbott was handicapped by Laing's weight, but the difference in size also inconvenienced the latter. Both showed cleverness.

The heavy weight sparring, the most anticipated of all the events, was awarded to Rogers over Murray. Murray's lack of training defeated him, for while his strength lasted his rushes were very effective. It took 4 rounds to decide this event.

In the second bout of the light weights between W. J. Lapham and E. R. Marvin there was little sparring but much excitement. The decision was given to Lapham as he met Marvin's rushes cleverly and did the real fighting from a sparring standpoint. Following is a summary of the events in their order:

Light weight sparring, preliminary bout; Lapham '93 and Bucknell '94. Lapham, winner, 3 rounds.

Feather weight sparring, preliminary bout; Whitford '94, Mann '94. Mann winner, 3 rounds.

Light weight wrestling, preliminary; Mills '95, Abbott '94. Abbott winner, 2 falls.

Heavy weight sparring; Murray '94, Rogers '94. Rogers, winner, 4 rounds.

Light weight sparring, final bout; Marvin '93, Lapham '93. Lapham, winner, 3 rounds.

Feather weight sparring, final bout; Sargent '95, Mann '94. Mann, winner, 3 rounds.

Light weight wrestling, final; Laing '95, Abbott '94. Laing '95, winner, 3 falls.

The judges were Mr. Thompson of Andover, Mr. L. H. Morse, Lawrence. Prof. Pettee was time-keeper. '93 won one event, '94 two, and '95 one.

Class Day Officers.

The Seniors in joint meeting yesterday elected their class day officers. The nominations were as follow: Orator, W. T. B. Williams and N. A. Smyth; poet, C. E. Thomas, R. C. Gilmore and W. B. Parker; historian, C. D. Millard; prophet, H. G. Wyer, W. J. Lapham; M. E. Stone, R. C. Gilmore and T. F. Russel; statistician, P. R. Lester and H. B. Winters.

The voting resulted as follows: Orator, N. A. Smyth, poet, W. B. Parker, Thomas and Gilmore both declining the nomination; historian, C. D. Millard; prophet, W. J. Lapham, all declining to run but him and Wyer; statistician, P. R. Lester.

Glee Club Concert.

The annual concert of the Phillips Glee, Banjo and Mandolin Clubs will take place in the Town Hall on Thursday evening of this week, and not on Friday as was advertised. The clubs have been diligently at work with their rehearsals since October, and have a much more attractive programme than any other Andover Club has ever had. They give a concert this evening in Wakefield under the auspices of the Quannapowitt Club. There are only a few seats left for the concert and those who have not arranged for their tickets should do so at once. The prices are 35 and 50 cents.

Natural History Society.

At the meeting of the Natural History Society last Saturday evening the following officers were elected: President, E. W. Cross '93; vice-president, I. D. Vann '93; secretary and treasurer, H. D. Whitfield '94. Mr. Boutwell gave an entertaining reading on Geology, and Mr. Woodruff reported that he had seen robins and bluebirds during the week. A debate was selected for the first meeting of next term.

The Andover Press.

The next number of the PHILLIPPIAN will be issued Wednesday morning.

The extra anniversary number of the PHILLIPPIAN will be put on sale Tuesday morning. We have tried to make a success of it, and we hope it will meet with the hearty approval of the entire school. The price will be within the reach of everyone. Our expenses will be considerably above our first estimates. We must, therefore, hope for a large sale.

From the proofs now in hand the artistic work of this number bids fair to elicit much praise.

The preliminary tournament last Saturday was quite successful, but it was to be regretted that the entries in the wrestling were so few. The boxing was good in the heavy and light weights, but the middle weight men in the last round showed little science, and it seemed as though it was their object to see who could hit the harder and not who could box the best. The action of the referee in requesting silence during the bouts was very commendable, and the fellows should have been more careful in observing it. This afternoon the final tournament comes off, and a good showing is expected in many of the events. We hope all the fellows will come up to the "gym," to-day and stay throughout the tournament, because it is discouraging, to say the least, to the contestants to see the spectators leaving, and fellows who have practised all winter deserve the support of the entire school. So let everyone come this afternoon, and make this tournament a greater success even than Saturday's was.

A New Curriculum at Wellesley.

A new curriculum has been adopted at Wellesley. The plan secures a readjustment of the proportion between required and elective work, the former to be reduced to the lowest possible point. The work is so proportioned that a little less than one-third of the amount necessary for a degree consists of free electives; about one-third of electives chosen under the control of the faculty, and a little more than one-third of required studies.

The subjects absolutely required are mathematics, philosophy, English composition, physiology and hygiene and Bible study; every student must take also one language and two sciences. Yet even into a large part of this nominally required work there enters the element of choice. Thus the student may satisfy the language requirements by electing either Greek, Latin, Anglo-Saxon, French, German, Italian or Spanish; she may satisfy the science requirement by selecting any two from the various sciences offered by the college. To a large extent the required subjects will be taken in the early part of the course, while the latter years will be left free for elective studies.

The Coming Spring.

Bids fair to be a prosperous one in all branches of business, and no business has put forth greater efforts than the Tailoring Business to meet the demands. Never in our time has such an exquisite line of "modest" style been shown, and we are going to be able to show a complete line in a few days. Many styles have arrived, and we shall be glad to spread them for those who call on us, and to promise a first-class garment at a reasonable price to those who favor us with their orders.

November Club Entertainment.

The dramatic entertainment by the November Club at their club house last night was a very successful one from all standpoints, for not only was the hall literally filled to overflowing, but also the acting was good, the music was good, and everyone was pleased. The first part of the entertainment consisted of a very pretty little comedy, entitled "A Rice Pudding." It would be difficult to determine the chief source of beauty in it, for there were several. The characters were represented by the Misses Sears and Mr. Alfred Ripley of Boston, together with Mr. Ropes of the Seminary and Harry Jennings of the Academy.

During the intervals Miss Hill, also of Boston, favored the audience with several choice selections of song. Then followed "A Love Game," by Miss Merrill and Mr. Berry of the Seminary. The game was excellently played, and if both won, contrary to the rules of tennis, it was only because of the peculiar merit of the contestants.

A Young Man to Young Men.

Mr. Fletcher Dobgas of Oberlin College, the national organizer of the Intercollegiate Prohibition Association has been secured to address the Andover students on Monday evening Mar. 27, in the Academy Hall. Mr. Dobgas has already spoken in more than fifty of the most important educational institutions of the county, and has received exceptionally favorable notices for his work, both from professors and students. This will be a favorable opportunity to hear of a movement which is going forward in most of the colleges of the country, and both students and the general public are invited. It is to be hoped that Andover will be allowed a representative at the state oratorical contest to be held about June 1.
