Andover 11; Boston College 2.

Being uneasy at the victory Boston College had over Holy Cross, Andover was disappointed when it was learned that Dowd would not pitch. Crawford did this work for the first six innings when it became necessary to replace him by Dowd who had been playing first base. With the exception of White, the Boston men did not play ball in college style at all, but almost threw the game away. Donovan and Jennings fielded well. Paige pitched a fine game, but was a little wild and gave six bases on balls.

Andover stole bases very cleverly considering the throwing abilities of Stack. Allen's stop of a line hit over third was the feature of the game.

The result might have been different if Dowd had pitched all the game, although two unearned runs were scored off him in the eighth and ninth.

The tabulated score follows:

All men who desire to compete for the following prizes at the "public meeting" must give their names and parts for which they wish to try, in the order of choice, to the president on or before May 26 (Friday next) to ensure eligibility. ## Mr. Edward Taylor.

On Sunday morning Mr. Edward Taylor, one of our trustees, and for twenty-one years treasurer of the Academy, passed away. Dr. Bancroft at chapel on Tuesday spoke briefly about Mr. Taylor and his useful career. Mr. Taylor's reserve of manner did not prevent his winning his way to a place of great usefulness. He was very simple in his habits, and yet there was in him a touch of the aristocrat which he inherited.

Early in the history of the country the first member of the family on his father's side to come to America settled near Boston. In 1671, Edward Taylor graduated from Harvard, and then studied theology. He was soon called back as a professional tutor. Later he cut his way through the forests to Westfield, Mass., and there organized a church and filled all the leading positions. Ezra Stiles, his grandson, and afterward President of Harvard, said that his grandfather was so poor and books so few that his grandfather wrote out on parchment one hundred volumes. He was a writer, but was often compelled to use the backs of his letters to write on. On his mother's side Mr. Taylor was a descendant from Elder Brewster.

In his youth Mr. Taylor went to Lenox and later to the Academy in Westfield, Mass., intending to enter college; but his health failed him and he was obliged to enter business. He very much regretted the loss of a college education, but he was never morose in his disappointment and was in hearty sympathy with the students at Andover.

At the age of seventeen he went to Boston as a book-keeper. Very soon he was appointed head book-keeper for a woolen house, and it was here that he attracted the attention of Benjamin Pynchard who persuaded him to come to Andover as cashier of the Andover Bank. He held this position for sixteen years, but, on account of his health, went to Marland Mills, where he remained for twenty years. He was ever doing things for the public good and held many offices of trust and was also sent to the Legislature.

When Squire Farrar grew feeble Mr. Taylor balanced the treasurer's books at the Academy, and also aided Mr. John Taylor, when he succeeded Squire Farrar. In this way he gained an experience and familiarity with affairs which well fitted him to assume the office of treasurer, which he held till four years and a half ago. Mr. Taylor was also prominent in all church matters. He was treasurer of the local Ministerial Aid Society, a deacon and Sunday School superintendent at the South Church, and was always ready to help in any good work. He developed a generous liberality. The western colleges received aid from him, and he was interested in a scholarly way in the American School of Archaeology at Athens.

Dr. Bancroft impressed the fact of the noble, Christian manhood of Mr. Taylor. He had no idle words to repent of, and he did a marvellous work in spite of difficulties. The burial services took place on Tuesday at half past three.

University Extension.

A short account of the University extension movement in this country may be of interest. It was started in 1890 by Dr. William Pepper provost of the University of Pennsylvania, to afford a system of instruction for adults, embracing lecture courses, with classes, exercises, examinations and certificates. The American Society for the extension of University Teaching, founded in 1890 by Dr. Pepper, has organized "local centres" in the neighboring states, and through branch societies and affiliated colleges has stimulated general diffusion of the system. The "Unit of Instruction" is a course of six or twelve weekly or fortnightly lectures, followed by a special conference or class. The "unit of organization" consists of a committee of citizens or the directors of a literary or social club, who are willing to assume the local management of the course. Lecturers are secured through the central office, either from the faculty of a neighboring college or from the society's regular staff. The growth of the system has been remarkable. In 1890-91 there were 23 centres in and near Philadelphia, before which 42 lecture courses were given to an average attendance of 10,000. In 1891-92 there were 59 "centres," 120 courses, and 25,000 students. At the annual National Conference at Philadelphia, many colleges and active extension centres in 20 states were represented, and the movement is rapidly gaining support in all parts of the country.—Ex.

Exeter's Spring Tournament.

Phillips Exeter Academy held its annual spring tournament on the campus Saturday morning. The events were all closely contested, and several records were closely approached. The events were as follows:

The shot putting was won by Connor, with a put of 33 feet, 9 inches. Daniels takes second place, with a put of 20 feet, 7 inches.

There were four starters in the 100-yards run. It was a very close race, and was won by Hardenbrook by about two feet. Time, 10 3-4 seconds. Second, Darling '93, time, 10 4-5 seconds.

After a short time all except Connor and Moe dropped out of the pole vault. Moe vaulted very prettily and cleared 8 feet, 6 inches, but could go no higher. Then Connor began to creep up on the school record. The bar was placed at 9 feet, 1 1-2 inches, 1-4 inch above the record, and Connor just missed it by a hair. His actual vault was 9 feet, 1-2 inch.

The first lap in the half-mile run was extremely slow, 1 minute, 15 seconds. McCall starts on the second lap with a fine spurt for 100 yards. Kent followed close at his heels. Corthell and Beckwith follow pretty well together, 10 yards in the rear. On the home stretch Kent passes McCall, and wins by a few feet. Time, 2 minutes, 16 1-2 seconds. The race showed a decided want of headwork.

Hollister made a hard try to beat his record in the mile run, and failed by only a second. Thomas made a good showing. Hollister '93, won; time, 4 minutes, 50 seconds. Second, Thomas; 5 minutes, 1 second.

The 220-yards race was very close between Hurley and Hardenbrook. Hurley won; time, 24 1-2 seconds. Hardenbrook second, in 24 4-5 seconds.

In the running high jump all the contestants were tired from the previous events, and the jumps were not high. Daniels won by a jump of 5 feet, 1 inch, Connor jumping 5 feet.

Hardenbrook won in the 120-yards hurdle race, Moe coming in second. Time, 20 1-5 seconds.

The 440-yards run proved to be faster than was expected, being within a second of the school record. Hurley got a poor start and remained behind until very near the finish, but by an excellent spurt came in ahead, with Sharp a close second. Time 55 1-2 seconds.

In the running broad jump all made a good showing. Daniels made a jump of 18 feet, 5 inches, winning the event. Connor made second, jumping 18 feet, 4 1-2 inches.—Exonian.

The Andover Press.

The preliminary tournament to-day should be given a full attendance by the students. Their presence in large numbers and their enthusiastic support will add not a little to the success of the events. The team has had many disadvantages in the way of the weather, and other obstacles to contend against, but they can be relied upon to do their best under the circumstances. The school wishes the team success. Then let every man be present to aid by his cheering and interest.

Naturally enough to-day's athletic results will be taken as a standard for comparison with Exeter's records in her tournament. Although figures alone are often an untrustworthy basis for reckoning in such events, still it will be gratifying to see our rival's achievements equalled, if not surpassed.

The loss the athletic team has sustained this year in several events should serve as a stimulus to greater efforts by those who remain and who must defend our position in this branch of athletics. The fact, too, that there are so few, if any, places already beyond question, ought to encourage a large number of men to try for these representative positions. The honor of being enrolled against Exeter is too well appreciated to need further mention.

C. F. Lang, P.A. '92, Brown University '96, caught on the Varsity team yesterday.

Yale Art School.

The school aims to give thorough technical instruction in the art of designing, drawing, painting, sculpture, architecture, and copper plate etchings, and to afford opportunity for studying the philosophy, history, and criticism of art. As a professional school of art, it is the aim to provide thorough practice in art studies, and, as a department of the University, to afford general culture in the fine arts. The instruction given to professional students is intended to train them in the fundamental principles before any special line of work is undertaken.

The instruction in the department of the history and criticism of art includes courses of lectures by instructors of the school. The course includes The Origin and Philosophy of the Art Principle, Greek Art, Egyptian Art, Oriental Art, Roman Art, Beginnings of Christian Art, Byzantine Art, Mediaeval Art, The Renaissance, and Modern Art.

The regular course for professional students is three years, but studies may be pursued for a longer time, and pupils remaining for more than four years are exempt from paying the tuition fee. Students are not received for less than three years, however. The school is open to both sexes. The fees are at the rate of ten dollars per month, with an annual fee of five dollars.

An elective course is provided for the Senior and Junior classes of the Academic Department, and a special course in freehand drawing is arranged for students in the Sheffield Scientific School, extending through the first term of the college year.

O. CHAPMAN.

We're in shape to talk pretty largely about our Hat Stock this season and yet talk truthfully.

We'll be modest, however, and just say it far outstrips anything we've heretofore shown, and that amounts to saying anything ever shown in Lawrence.
You wouldn't lose anything just to drop in and see what we have.
