Governor Roosevelt on Yale Men in the Late War.

Governor Roosevelt in his speech at the fourteenth annual dinner of the Yale Alumni Association of Rhode Island, paid quite a tribute to the bravery of John C. Greenway P. A. '91, Yale '95. Andover should feel no less proud of Lieutenant Greenway than Yale. Among other things Governor Roosevelt said:

"I may perhaps be pardoned for a few reminiscences of Mr. Greenway. I do not make any excuse for treating him as an object of note, because of course the mere soldier in him does not compare with the reputation of the football man or the man who caught when 'Dutch' Carter pitched."

* * * * *

"When Greenway and his fellow Yale men joined us in company with a number of men from my own college and a number of others, Mr Alexander of Princeton among them, the thing that I liked most about the way that those men came into the regiment was that they did not come in with the desire or expectation of having an easy time, of getting a commission or having any preferment, but they came in one and all, simply as Americans, to stand on their own feet, to go up if the war lasted long enough and they proved able to go up. They got nothing except what they earned by earnest and hard work and they claimed nothing except the chance to show themselves just as good as anyone else. In other words they had realized what it seems to me the graduate of an American university should realize, that his experience does not confer upon him any immunity, but on the contrary it entails on him the duty of showing himself a little better in the actual hurly-burly of practical life than those who have not had these advantages."

* * * * *

"Each man won his place on his merits. 'Jack' Greenway went in as a trooper and was promoted to a non-commissioned officer, second lieutenant, and then first lieutenant, because he had won each promotion by showing what he could do in the camp, on the march and in battle. As long as he showed himself worthy, nobody could take those titles away from him, and if he had not shown himself worthy he might have had the pull of the President and every senator behind him and he would never have gone up."

Communications.

[The Editors of the PHILLIPIAN invite all members of the school to express their sentiments in these columns, but do not hold themselves responsible for what is said.]

Editors of the Phillipian:

Several persons seem to have gotten the wrong impression from the attitude taken by 1901 in regard to the matter of suits for the base-ball team. 1901 does not wish to act obstinately in this matter, but we feel that, in as much as the other classes since class base-ball has been inaugurated have furnished their teams with suits in their Junior-middle year, we have the same right to do so this year. It is an easy matter for 1900 or '99 to consent to giving up suits. They have had the consolation of having had suits. 1900 will hardly need suits this year, for one half of their men are back and have their suits from last year.

The impression that 1901 is not patriotic on account of its stand is wrong. When the time comes to show patriotism or school spirit 1901 will not be last in showing it.

1901.

Editors of the Phillipian:

A few weeks ago a communication was published in the PHILLIPIAN, in regard to the board track. In the next issue there appeared an editorial which advised the school to hope for the best but in no way answered the demands of the communication. Not one statement was proved incorrect and by the silence since then, we infer that the communication was correct in its statement. If this be true then the same objections hold true and the affair is as far from settlement as at the beginning.

ANOTHER SUBSCRIBER.

Philo.

The programme for the meeting of Philo Friday night is as follows:
 Declamation, Stern.
 Address, Sweet.
 Select Reading, H. H. Thomson.
 Debate, Resolved, That Hobson was more heroic than Dewey. Affirmative, Burkam, Cannon; negative, Donovan, Hill.

Forum.

The election of officers for next term will take place at Forum Friday night.

Exeter Letter.

EXETER, N. H., }
 MARCH 14, 1899. }

Editors of the Phillipian:

The annual handicap meet was held last Saturday afternoon. A very noticeable feature of the meet was the large number of men entered, who are not trying for the track team. Several of these men ran strong races and in some events, with the handicap given them, won first place.

The Senior class held its banquet at the Squamscott hotel, Tuesday evening of last week. An excellent dinner was served during which many good toasts were given.

At a meeting of the golf players, held a short time ago, a club was formed and the following officers were elected.

President, R. C. Stevenson.

Vice president, W. A. Hersey.

Secretary and treasurer, T. J. Egan.

A large number of fellows are working hard for the annual Winter Exhibition which will be held in the Gymnasium the last Monday evening of this term.

The fellows interested in getting up a Minstrel show met last Tuesday and elected a manager. The manager then appointed a committee to assist him in the management of the show. It will be held next term for the benefit of the athletic association.

EXONIAN.

March Mirror.

The contents of the March Mirror which will appear Friday, are as follows:

Jake, Roland J. Dodd.

Remembering, (verse) Jean Ross Irvine.

A Trick of Satan, G. S. Arnold.

Narcissus, (verse) I. Stafford Goddard.

Sonnet, H. L. Wadsworth.

Mad, Alan Fox.

Mirage, Editorials, Exchanges, Leaves from Phillips Ivy.

1901 Class Meeting.

At a meeting of 1901 held Saturday noon, it was voted to give their baseball team suits, consisting of caps, jerseys, sweaters, shirts, pants and stockings. It was also decided to take up a special subscription for fireworks.

Lowell Concert.

The three musical clubs will give a concert at the Highland Club, Lowell, on Friday evening, March 17th. The clubs pay their own expenses and will be given a dance after the programme, by the members of the club. Another concert will be given at the beginning of next term probably at Haverhill. The programme will be:

The Andover Press.

Wednesday, March 15, 1899.

The Junior Middlers, regardless of the advice of the Athletic Advisory Committee, have decided to give their class team players complete baseball outfits, and also to solicit subscriptions for fireworks. These innocent and guileless Junior Middlers, who have so recently laid aside the garb of "prepdom," have no doubt been actuated by a few fiery and imaginative speakers to take this action, the consequence of which they have never once considered.

While the Athletic Advisory Committee is rather autocratic in its actions, and has done considerable to destroy the spirit of the school and class meetings, still it hardly seems necessary for the Junior Middle class "to bite its nose off to spite its face."

The class games are desirable. They offer an excellent outlet for school-boy enthusiasm and they help to a great extent to create strong class spirit, which is needed in both school and college life. But the class games we have had in the past have been too expensive. The Junior Middlers have just decided to make the game on their part equally as expensive this year as they have been in the past, or possibly more expensive.

The classes that have heretofore given their teams suits have invariably managed to have on hand a number of bills which they were unable to pay. It is needless for us to say that it is injustice to the school for a class to leave behind unpaid bills. We all know that it is far easier to talk about subscribing money and even to subscribe this money than it is to pay it and those who have talked most about subscribing money will in all probability subscribe less than the average member.

Fireworks are not necessary, and besides the use of them gives opportunity for too many mischievous tricks. No great objection can be raised to a good friendly scrap, but fireworks offer too many chances for cowardly acts. If 1901 is determined to do as they like in this matter, it is the duty of '99 to check them. The managers of the 1901 team should collect the necessary amount for the suits before they place their order.

Prof. Tyler to Lecture at Abbot Academy.

Professor John M. Tyler of Amherst College will lecture in the Abbot Academy course on the 16th and 17th of March, Thursday and Friday, at 8 P. M., in the Abbot Academy Hall. Single tickets will be 35 cents, course tickets 50 cents, and friends of the Academy are welcome. Prof. Tyler's first lecture will be "The Survival of the Fittest," and the second "The Sequence of Motives."

Class Book Notice.

The Class Book editors have decided not to print the signatures of the class. Seniors are again reminded that their photographs must be in before the 20th of this month.

C. E. Chapman P. A. '98, Princeton '02 is one of the most prominent candidates for first base on the Princeton 'Varsity. Chapman played first base on the '97 & '98 Andover teams.

C. J. Duncan P. A. '93 coached the baseball candidates Monday.

H. P. Wickes P. A. '96 is being tried at number 2 on the Yale crew.

At the Fair of the Andover Brass Band and Cricket Club to be held in the Town Hall, April 4, 5, 6, 7. Burns & Crowley, the popular tailors offer a pair of choicest pantaloons to the most popular baseball player in Andover, to be decided by vote. The contest is open to students of the Academy.

The pictures of the Glee Club and Phillips Street foot-ball team were taken at Hitchcock's studio Monday. The Chess Club picture was taken Tuesday.

Forum has chosen the affirmative side of the Philo-Forum debate. The question for debate is, Resolved, "That the income tax is a desirable scheme of taxation."

Forum's dinner was served at the Mansion House last Saturday. Mr. Allen of the Faculty and W. B. Parker P. A. '93 were guests of the Society.

We copy this from the Exonian:

"The action taken by the Andover faculty, in voting that no student of the academy shall hereafter hold more than one of several important school offices, is of particular interest to this school, where the need of some such regulation is obvious. It happens often here that one man holds two or more of the responsible and important school offices, and that, as a consequence, he suffers for it in lowering of scholarship or in other ways. These offices are sometimes sought after, and in that case, if the consequences are harmful, the blame is easily placed. On the other hand the offices sometimes seek the man, and school spirit costs him dear. In either case it is doubtful if any man can keep up a high grade of school work and, at the same time, do the best of work in more than one of these important positions. It surely would be of benefit to the students, individually, and to the school as a body, if a rule were made here substantially the same as that just adopted at our sister school.
