Last Saturday afternoon the annual fall track meet was held and although no records were broken, some good material was developed, especially in the dashes and long runs. The relay race was the most interesting event, and also the closest, as '07 and '05 were only two feet apart at the finish. ## Archaeology Notes.

A number of slides have been received by the Department from various museums and individuals. These slides are made from negatives taken in the field by various exploring expeditions. They cover a wide range of territory and some of them illustrate the Esquimo of Greenland, others show peoples of the Klondyke and yet others portray the tribes in Arizona, Mexico, Yucatan, Peru, Bolivia, etc. The Department now has several hundred of these slides and will use them in illustrating lectures on ethnology every Tuesday from 10.15 to 11.15. Any fellows who care to see the pictures can come into the Archaeology class on Tuesdays.

It is hoped that the Camera Club will take a new lease of life this winter. The dark room provided for the Camera Club is thoroughly equipped and is as fine as can be found in New England. Sufficient chemicals and apparatus are on hand for developing and the fellows should get together and make use of the facilities offered.

Professor Gates has kindly offered to assist in making a card index of the Archaeological Library according to the Congressional plan which is being used in the Seminary Library. All the books in each place will then be in complete order to be found and referred to whenever anyone wishes to do so. It is thought that all parties will be pleased with this form of index.

Football Statistics.

The official football guide for this year contains the following summary of the report of Prof. Edwin G. Dexter of the University of Illinois, who has been conducting an extensive investigation of injuries received in college football.

1. About one college man in ten the country over plays football.

2. About twice as large a proportion of the men in the small colleges play the game as in the larger universities.

3. The proportion of men playing seems to be decreasing.

4. About one player in thirty-five is injured sufficiently each season to necessitate loss of time from college duties.

5. The number of college football players who are permanently injured or who die from the effects of the game is so small as to be practically a negligible quantity.

6. College football is adequately supervised in nearly all institutions.

7. The opinion of college officers regarding the value of the game is about 17 to 1 in favor.

8. The newspaper reports of injuries to college football players seem to be greatly exaggerated.

9. Accident insurance statistics would lead us to believe that many other forms of sport are more dangerous than football.

These results are based on statistics furnished by the officers of sixty of the more important colleges of the country. The figures cover the last ten years, during which period of time out of the number of 22,766 students playing the game 654 were injured to such a degree that they lost time from their classes. This is to the proportion of less than three to 100 players. Of the serious injuries but eight were of permanent nature. Three cases resulted fatally; two of these being untrained men.

Mass Meeting This Evening.

THE ANDOVER PRESS

Saturday, Oct. 22, 1904.

In view of the fact that including today's game only two games now remain to be played before the team goes to Lawrenceville, it is hardly necessary to urge upon the school the necessity of every member being present at the field this afternoon. The game is going to be a hard one and our team will need every ounce of backing and encouragement that the school can give, if we hope to win a victory. Exeter's heavy eleven, which has played such a brilliant game so far this season, was only able to score eleven points against the Freshmen last Saturday. We want to beat that score and we will do so if every man in school performs his duty. Any man who is absent from Andover today, unless it be through absolute necessity, is not worthy to be called an Andover man. Let us all then, make the team's interests our own personal interests for the next three weeks, and we will reap our just reward by closing the season with a victory over our rivals.

Although nothing can be added to what Mr. Stearns has already said in chapel in regard to the vandalism of clipping articles from the papers and magazines in the reading room, we wish to impress upon the school the importance of heeding his warning. A fellow who will cut a piece out of any of the reading room papers is certainly very unjust, and every fellow in school should have better principles than to do a thing of this sort. He is also depriving others of their rights, as he may cut out exactly the piece that someone else is looking for, and he destroys the property of others for selfish reasons. We sincerely hope that the fellows who have been doing this will think it over, and that the matter will not have to be brought up again.

Today's Games.

Today's football games for the large colleges will be as follows:
Yale vs. West Point at West Point.
Harvard vs. Carlisle Indians at Cambridge.
Princeton vs. Lehigh at Princeton.
Dartmouth vs. Holy Cross.
Amherst vs. Brown at Providence.
Harvard 2nd vs. Exeter at Exeter.

Morris K. Smith, P. A. '03, is the editor of The Dartmouth, in charge of Athletics.

Yale Has 2995 Students.

Preliminary figures of the registration of students in the various departments of Yale University were given out from the secretary's office Thursday. The total number of students enrolled at present is 2995, this being the largest number in the history of the university. The department which shows the largest increase is the Sheffield Scientific School, which has about fifty more students than last year. The department with the second largest increase is the college proper, in which there are thirty-six more students enrolled than a year ago. A slight falling off in the law school is due to the increase of tuition fees and the very much more stringent examinations for admission and advancement. The other departments of the university show that the enrolment is approximately the same as last year, in spite of more stringent entrance requirements. The registration of the university has increased every year during the past decade. In 1904 it was 2350; in 1899, 2517; in 1902, 2725.

Harvard Athletic Rules Changed.

The Harvard athletic committee at a recent meeting made a change in the Harvard eligibility rules, which is the most radical that has been made in years. The rule which was adopted was to cover cases of breaking the Harvard rules before coming to college. The rule has not yet been put into definite form, but the gist of it is that when a boy unintentionally breaks a rule before coming to college, the committee may allow him to represent Harvard in athletics.

With this rule on the Harvard books there will be no more such disqualifications as in the cases of Orville G. Frantz and Oliver Cutts, both of whom violated rules long before they came to college. The new rule will not, however, apply to such cases as those of Schick and Le Moynes in the intercollegiate track games. The rule debarring men from competing in the intercollegiate games during their first year in college, who have taken part in open games, is an intercollegiate rule, and one over which Harvard has no further control than her vote in the executive committee.

The committee passed another vote prohibiting a man from taking part in more than two branches of sport in the same year. This will not affect many men, as few take part in more than two branches of sport. The only teams that will be affected will be minor branches of sport, such as hockey and basketball.

The committee also decided to allow teams representing Harvard to play only on college grounds, except by a special vote of the athletic committee. The committee again passed the vote enacted last spring that no team in winter sports, which plays games between Dec. 1 and April 1, shall be allowed to take part in more than three contests which involve either their absence from recitations or from Cambridge over night; and that no freshman team in these branches of sport be allowed to take part in any contest of this sort.
