ANDOVER TRACK TEAM SWAMPS WEAK M. I. T. 102-24 ON SATURDAY

Yearlings Strong Only In Two Events, 440 And Mile

CAHNERS SHOWS UP IN 100

Andover Team Captures All Points
In Six Events; Coaches
Encouraged

In the annual meet between the M. I. T. Freshmen and Phillips Academy on last Saturday, April 30th, Andover swamped the yearlings, 102 to 24. The meet was held here, the Andover varsity capturing every place in six events from their opponents. The Freshmen were extremely weak in all events except the 440 and the mile. Cahn, previously a mainstay of the hammer throw, showed great promise in the 100-yard dash; and Harper, a runner of consistent ability, should develop into a highly valued man during the next two or three meets. The summary for the different events follows:

GAME PREPARATION FOR P. M. C. CONTEST

The Andover polo team will go to Danvers to play the Danvers Riding and Polo Club team today. The Andover players will be Captain Royal, Hook, Whitney, and Bird. The Danvers Club team will probably consist of Mr. Cyrus Newbegin, captain and also president of the club, Judge Daniel Manning, Mr. Leonard Pickring, and Mr. William Pickring, the father of "Buddy" Pickring of the Pennsylvania Military College Freshman polo team, which Andover is to play against at Danvers on Saturday. The Danvers Club game is mainly a preparation for this more important game with P. M. C. The Andover horsemen were beaten by the Danvers Club last fall and a hard game should result today. After the P. M. C. game this Saturday, the polo players will meet the Norwich University junior team on the 21st.

FEW ATTEND ANNUAL BRADFORD CONCERT

Combined Musical Club Trip Proves
Successful, Though Few
Present

The Musical Clubs made their annual trip to Bradford last Saturday evening, giving a concert together with the Bradford Glee Club and attending a dance with the Bradford students. Although only twenty-nine were in the Andover party, the trip was tolerably successful.

Upon arriving at their destination, the Andover students held a brief rehearsal and then inspected the grounds of the school under the guidance of Mr. Eaton. The dance lasted an hour and a half immediately after dinner and was followed by the concert of the combined glee clubs before the entire Bradford student body.

"THE GREEN GODDESS" CHOSEN AS SPRING PLAY

To Be Presented In June
By P. A. Dramatic Club

PLAY FIRST GIVEN WITH GEORGE ARLISS

The Andover Dramatic Club will present its second play of the school year toward the end of this term, probably early in Commencement week; the date as yet has not been definitely set. The play, "The Green Goddess", by the late William Archer, was first presented in 1920 with George Arliss playing the leading role of the Raja of Rukh. The same actor later led the cast when the play was made into a motion picture a few years ago. The plot, full of melodrama, color, and suspense, is well adapted to the tastes of a school audience.

Using the tryout lists of last fall and the cast of the mid-winter play as a basis, Mr. Heely, who will direct the production, will at once assign a tentative cast, rehearsals beginning immediately. In order to permit anyone not originally selected to compete for a part, the rehearsals for the first two weeks

GOLF TEAM DEFEATS DUMMER DECISIVELY

Most Matches Won By Seven
Up And Five
To Go

The golf team won its second victory of the year in a game with Governor Dummer Academy Saturday, by the decisive score of seven to two. The only set back in the twosomes came when J. Brown was defeated by the score of seven up and five to go. In the four-somes Sophian and Brown were defeated four and two for the other point. One of the most exciting matches of the afternoon was Bartow's, who defeated his man two and one. At one time in his match he was three down. Capt. Case also won his match by the large margin of seven and five, his man turning in the score of one hundred and sixteen. Rogers played number one man and won by six and four, while both Sophian and Diven won their matches by the score of seven and five.

Woodlock, Former Captain Of Andover And Present Yale Leader,
Plays Well

The Andover baseball team was defeated by the Yale Freshmen Saturday by the score of eleven to three. The fact that the Yale team made seven of their eleven runs in one inning shows that the team with the exception of that one inning was playing an improved brand of baseball. The hitting was bad, the only hits of the game for Andover being those of O'Neil and Corrigan in the ninth. Because of the wind, the fielding for the most part was poor, and many of the Yale hits can be blamed on this. Renter pitched a good game but received little support from the field. Captain Woodlock, R. Wheeler, and E. King, who played for Yale, were all members of last year's Andover team. The play was not especially interesting with the ex-

Abbot Academy Giving Dance This Afternoon

Phillips Academy students are welcome to attend the "Colonial Revels" which Abbot Academy is giving in its yearly celebration of its founding. A bazaar will open in Davis Hall at 2:00 p. m., with candy, flowers, gifts, and entertainment. The admission will be 25 cents. At 2:45 informal dancing will begin and will last until six. Music will be furnished by the Riveters.

NEW POST OFFICE TO OPEN IN SEPTEMBER

Progress Now Ahead Of Schedule;
New Location Will Be
More Convenient

The new post office which is being rapidly built across the street from the bookstore is being constructed by Stephen Druso & Sons, Inc. The work at present is ahead of schedule, and the building is expected to be completed about September. The cost is $69,693.

The new building is to be 68 by 64 feet, and will have one story and a basement. The exterior is faced with antique waterstruck brick, with a base of granite, white marble being used for the trim. The first floor will contain the workroom, mailing vestibule, mailing office and registry, the postmaster's office and the lobby, which will have a wainscot of cream venato marble and a floor of Westfield green marble. In the basement will be storage rooms, offices, and the carriers' swing room.

Student Council To Give Tea Dance On Saturday

Because of the overwhelming success of the tea dances given last term, the Student Council will continue this practice this spring, the first dance being held in the Junior Dining Hall of the Commons between the hours of four-thirty and seven p. m., Saturday. The music will be furnished by Val Jean's orchestra of Boston, which has been so well received at Andover on former occasions. Refreshments will be served as usual.

The patronesses will be Mrs. Barss, Mrs. Eccles, and Mrs. Blackmer.

BARR AND MANSFIELD STAR FOR ANDOVER

The Andover tennis team will meet the St. Mark's players in the second match of the season this afternoon. If the weather conditions are favorable, the play should be superior to that of Saturday. Although nothing definite has been determined by Coach Trowbridge, the line-up will probably be the same as that of the opening match.

In its first match of the season, Saturday, the Andover tennis team went down to defeat before the Harvard Junior Varsity. Due to a very high wind the play was rather erratic, many of the shots being hindered. For Andover, Mansfield and Barr were outstanding, winning both their matches; for the J. V's Mitchell and Richmond starred. The summaries are as follows:

BAND PLANS NOW BEING FORMED FOR SPRING

Canvass Of School May Be Held
For Needed Financial Aid

The Phillips Academy Band may not go on the field this spring at either the Andover-Exeter track meet or baseball game, according to Mr. Smith, faculty adviser of the band, because the necessary funds to finance such a project are not available at present. To raise the necessary money the financial support of the entire student body will be needed. An entertainment such as the one held last fall is one means by which to meet the situation, but in preference to this method, a general canvass of the school might be held.

"The band is a student organization," said Mr. Smith, "and as such, it is up to the student body to give it the help that is needed. To put a good band on the field is more expensive than it may appear to be at first glance"

Mr. Ives, the bandmaster of the past two years, is still in a critical condition, suffering from the stroke with which he suffered last fall. Another bandmaster is now being sought to fill his position.

RECENT CUT REDUCES SQUAD

Cates To Pitch For Andover Nine—
Yearlings Have Strong
Team

The Blue baseball team with a rather discouraging list of defeats behind it will take the field this afternoon against the New Hampshire Freshman nine. The team has learned much in its recent games and Coach Billhardt hopes that the team will acquire confidence this afternoon.

W. Cates, who with rather poor support held the Yale cubs to four runs in the last seven innings of Saturday's game, will start for the Blue.

A recent cut in the squad has reduced it sufficiently to allow Coach Billhardt to give more attention to polishing the regular players.

W. GORDON OF YALE SPEAKS TO S. OF I.

Relates His Experiences On Bicycle Tours Through England And Germany

INTENDS TO VISIT RUSSIA NEXT SUMMER

William Gordon, P. A. '30, discussed his two European bicycle tours before a group rather smaller than usual in Peabody House, Sunday evening. His first trip was through England and Scotland and last summer he toured Germany, acting as Associated Press correspondent at the Goethe Festival. He intends to visit Russia in the same way this coming summer.

While here at Andover, Mr. Gordon started the local branch of Toc H, and on his trip through England spent many nights in Toc H houses, where he was always cordially welcomed. His adventures were many, from causing the marriage between an old German lady and a man she had never seen before, to climbing into a Scotch castle by a drain pipe and running down a would-be thief with his bicycle.

SAXONS AND GAULS WIN CLUB BASEBALL

Saxons Defeat Romans Six To Three;
Gauls The Greeks By Five
To Two

Another round of baseball was played between the clubs Monday with the Saxons defeating the Romans by a score of six to two, and the Gauls triumphing over the Greeks with a final score of five to two. In the Saxon-Roman game Reese started in the box with Sanson behind the plate, but Mathew relieved Reese soon after the beginning of the game. Newnan and Barnes pitched and caught respectively for the Romans.

In the Greek-Gaul game Carlson and A. M. Clark were the batteries for the Greeks and Beebe and W. Wilson for the Gauls.

Is Politics Too Dirty?

The Yale News recently created a nation-wide furore by flatly stating that politics is "just too dirty" for the college man. "When a government has fallen in the estimation of a people so that its finest and strongest people will not take part in it, that government," the News asserts, "is on the wane. The American government is menaced by a real, nationwide disgust of this kind." The editorial went on to say: "The bare fact that a Seabury investigation can exist at all is a disgrace to the largest city of the nation." And the News asserted of Congress: "Without any lack of due respect for the officials of this nation, the knowledge of economics and government recently revealed by many Congressmen in connection with taxes, tariffs, bonuses, etc., is insufficient to pass the first mid-term test in elementary econ at Yale." The News after these reflections concludes that "the most serious of all menaces to American principles" is this increasing abhorrence of the educated young man for participating in the government of his state and country.

Shortly afterward the New York Herald Tribune published the results of a poll of representative college editors, which showed the majority felt that the "dirt" in politics could be removed by the participation of college men. Some editors felt that the "dirty" practices and lack of remuneration made politics unattractive for college graduates. Others felt that college men should quickly seize the opportunity to "clean up" the government and should prove the value of their education. Still another editor, frankly referring to the election methods of fraternity cliques, suggested that the undergraduate "should attempt to clean up a bit in his own back yard." But the Dartmouth voiced what appears to be the most sensible and logical objection to politics as a career. It said: "The main reason why college graduates are actually not going into politics is not because politics is 'just too dirty' as we see it; the reason why is simply this: politics—American plan—is not a young man's game. The entire organization of politics in the United States postulates that a man must have attained at least his middle thirties before becoming eligible for responsible public office; and in the meantime, what? The dozen-odd years which lie between graduation from college and the age at which a man is considered ripe enough for political plums must be spent ward heeling, vote getting, packing baseball bats and May poles for Farley-for-Sheriff associations, and in general ingratiating."

Undoubtedly the average young graduate from college has a deep-rooted aversion to any participation in politics; how much more he prefers to casually condemn current political machines, to marvel at the disclosures which periodically occur, to criticize almost every conceivable governmental action. To overcome this lethargy famous men continually urge the young "grads" to take up politics as a profession. With scarcely any exception these fervent pleas stir up nothing but laudatory editorials abounding in vague generalities. The latest of these exhortations emanates from Governor Cross of Connecticut by way of the April Forum. He observes that student interest in politics is strong and believes that "the next step should be to translate intention into actions." We believe that idealists are helpful in their place. But let us look at the practical pros and cons of the question.

Objections to politics as a profession are briefly four: the long apprenticeship and period lasting a decade or more, of "toadying" to leaders; the lack of adequate remuneration; the fixed system now in force which must be adhered to and which the politicians in power do not want to change; and the frequent forced participation in shady practices. On the other side of the question is the undeniable fact that most American businesses today are "dirty" to some degree. Politics is not a glaring example of a profession of underhand and deceitful dealings; it is only a profession whose "dirt" is more publicized and perhaps a trifle blacker than the rest. And other college "grads" have made good in politics. Examples are numerous in Washington but too infrequent in local governments. Undeniably the American system of government is at present at a low ebb. When Congress acts like a circus and is taken seriously by no one but the Senators and Congressmen themselves, when the country is enslaved in the bonds of a prohibition law that a majority of the people do not want and that brings on them the corruption, lawlessness, and "racketeering" now so prevalent, when bills of vital importance to the nation are made mere political playthings, then is the United States at a critical moment in its history. It is the college who must salvage the ship of state. Undoubtedly it is a difficult task, involving hardship and sacrifice, but he, and only he, can do it.

IN PASSING

We were embarrassed, not to say chagrined, to discover last week that the printer, in putting both the Alumni Column cut and the In Passing cut at the head of our column, could not decide which one it was supposed to be.

Our first feeling on seeing the new carpet in the chapel was an overwhelming nostalgia for the old miniature golf courses, but unfortunately we didn't have our favorite putter.

Oscar Zileh, Phillips Academy, Andover, is requested to call at the Library for the copies of the Literary Digest that have been arriving there addressed to him for the past month.

We have it all figured out. In the second club team games the big scores are made by walks, in the first team games, by hits, and in the varsity games, by—well so far there haven't been any scores.

It is said that when the English Antique glass for the windows of the new chapel arrived from Lawrence the foreman on the job sent it back as discolored. We haven't been able to decide what we would have done.

The Academy, whether it knows it or not, is indebted to the In Passing Editor for the discovery of a little known fact, viz: that the chapel bell is dedicated to Josiah Bartlett, Governor of New Hampshire, and first signer of the Declaration of Independence. So now we know that everything around the school is dedicated to someone, except the chimney at the Power House which we haven't as yet investigated. Another interesting fact is that the bell is a Liberty bell; that is, it bears the inscription of the better known Liberty Bell, "Proclaim Liberty throughout all the Land and to all the Inhabitants thereof." We smiled cynically when we thought of two hundred boys running every time that bell so much as banged.

Either an anti-boarding campaign is being run at M. I. T. or the manager of Freshman track was in the business, but anyway, said manager was seen with no less than eight watch chains stretched across his brawny vest while the meet was in progress.

MEMORIAL DAY EXCUSES

To the Editor of THE PHILLIPPIAN:

In each term during the school year there comes one short holiday. During the fall term we have Thanksgiving Day, during the winter term, Washington's Birthday, and during the spring term, Memorial Day. I doubt whether many students have given much thought to Memorial Day, merely accepting the fact that it is going to be a holiday as it has been in the past. What then is going to be the reaction of the student body when it hears that on Memorial Day, although we will be free of classes, no excuses are to be granted, no absences of any kind from school?

In past years there have been Andover-Exeter track meets, or baseball games, some event which has been of general interest to the school. This year, however, with the exception of a baseball game, which is not of relative importance, there is nothing going on during this national holiday. What is more, it so happens that May 30 falls on a Monday, thus combining with a regular weekend to make a pleasant, short vacation. But for the benefit of those who are unable to take a full week-end, it makes a full day which could be spent in Boston. It would seem that the backers of this "no-excuse" plan can have no possible basis for making it, since the identical thing of which I write, was done on Washington's Birthday and certainly no disaster occurred from that short, but exceedingly gratifying holiday. Why, then, could not the same thing be repeated on May 30?

From April fourth to June twenty-fifth is a long, hard grind, especially with the College Boards so near. A short break in the term can be of no disadvantage, while on the other hand it gives the student something to look forward to, and something to look back upon. It would be beneficial not only to students but to the faculty. It is, then, almost a necessity, a thing which the school as a whole needs, and a thing which the school as a whole most certainly wants.

LIBRARY EXAM CRITICIZED

To the Editor of THE PHILLIPPIAN:

Of all the duties imposed on the innocent and unprotected heads of Phillips Academy students undoubtedly one of the most useless is the "Library Exam". These periodic outbursts of somebody's wrath have more effect than is evidently expected.

I have always understood that the Spring term of the senior year especially was reserved for concentrated efforts towards both a diploma and the important College Board Examinations, not to a task to which some students must spend from eight to fifteen hours of extra, merely clerical work. It is hard for me to understand also why one library examination, at all events, in the Upper Middle year is not a sufficient exercise to enable a student to be able to find plenty of "sources" of information on the various "topics" assigned.

As for the popular misconception that we are learning to use the library to aid us in our college work, I have been led to understand that the use of the library is in no way imperative to one's course of study for the first two years anyway.

If the librarian or teacher who proposed this measure can in any way explain the advantage to be gained from this boring and laborious task, then "let there be light" will be open for all students who wish to attend them. At any time a student may apply for a tryout for any part which he thinks that he is able to carry; and if his interpretation seems better than that of the original selection, he will be promoted to the cast. This system will give an excellent opportunity for anybody outside the Dramatic Club to display his talent, which is particularly wanted at present, due to the fact that the time is so short before the play will be presented.
