ADDRESS TO RIFLE CLUB

Squad Organization Completed

On Monday afternoon in the Chapel, Lieutenant Stockton, of the United States Coast Artillery, gave the members of the Rifle Club their first instructions and an outline of the methods to be pursued in the drilling, target practice, etc. Lieut. Stockton commenced by telling of the condition of the United States military forces and how the comparative smallness of the regular army and the National Guard, which together number less than 200,000, made it necessary for the United States to rely practically entirely upon the "citizen soldiers." He said that in the past the "citizen soldiers" had justified the confidence reposed in them, for then the Americans lived in the country to a much greater extent and hence had an opportunity to learn the rudiments of marksmanship by hunting and target practice in the open. At the present time, however, he continued, a large percentage of the population live in cities and hence have no opportunity to learn anything at all about high-powered rifles. Consequently Major-General Wood and other progressive officers had decided that the best way to further the efficiency of the American "citizen soldier" was to train the young men in the preparatory schools and colleges in the use of the modern high-powered rifle. A limited supply of arms and ammunition had been granted by Congress for this purpose, through the efforts of General Wood and other prominent men, and some of these were to be furnished to this Rifle Club.

Lieut. Stockton then proceeded to explain the mechanism of the modern "Krag" rifle, which is to be used by the club members in their practicing. After showing the system of loading and firing, and explaining the necessity for caution in the handling of the gun, he gave the fellows specimen pieces of powder to hand around to one another. The powder was in large chunks and not in the fine grains in which powder is generally supposed to be. When lighted, the chunk burned slowly like a torch, but did not explode. The powder was quite different from ordinary black powder.

The course of instruction to be given was the speaker's next point. First, the members of the club will be given setting-up drills and will be taught the proper method of sighting. This part will be somewhat tedious and tiresome, and yet it is one of the most important steps in the course, for no one who cannot sight a gun properly can ever expect to become a proficient shot. The method to be pursued in teaching this, will be to have the gun placed in a stationary rest; unloaded, and then have the pupil look over the sights at a piece of cloth, which some one stationed near the target is waving. When the cloth reaches the point in line with his sighting, the one who is sighting notifies the man at the target, and the latter puts a marker at the designated place. The man in charge then looks to see if the sighting is correct or not. If not, he makes the necessary corrections. This is the system employed in the regular army and has proved very effective.

The next step will be gallery practice. Twenty-two calibre barrels will be placed upon the rifles instead of the customary barrel

LETTER FROM HAMPTON

February 15, 1915.

Phillips Academy,
Andover, Mass.

Dear Friends:

We thought you might like to hear again from Bernard Ward, the boy to whom your scholarship went last year, and so have given him the opportunity to write. I enclose his letter.

The life of our trade boys is a strenuous one, and there are a good many who, like Ward, do not find it easy to wrestle with shop problems all day and spend the required two hours in classroom work at night. I wonder if you would be interested to know what is taken into account in judging of the work of the boys in the trade school. They are speed, accuracy, judgment, initiative, earnestness, neatness, responsibility and conduct, and all round estimate, you see. In the last report which has come under my eye, Ward has fallen below fair plus in none of these. As his letter indicates, he has still much to learn in the use of the English language. One of our great problems is how to correct in the limited time they are with us the speech of these boys and girls who all their lives have heard only poor English.

We join Ward in expressing appreciation of the part you have had in helping him to an education.

Sincerely yours,
ADDIE JAYNE.

Hampton Institute,
Hampton, Virginia,
February 15, 1915.

Dear friends:

I'll take this great pleasure of writing you a few lines.

I am in the trade school and do not have much leisure time. I work in there every day except Thursdays and Sundays. Thursday is my work day which is usually spent in cleaning the dormitories. My work on Sunday is in the afternoon. This is to go to the Hampton Jail to do missionary work. I attend every Sunday that I can with a number of Hampton students. This work I think I like best of all. I am not much on singing, praying or reading, but nevertheless I try to do my part.

The work in the trade school is not so hard, but I am in a rush most of the time to get there on time. The trade that I am taking is bricklaying. I feel as though I am doing well at it. Sometimes I have gotten a little discouraged and felt like giving the trade up, but haven't gotten as much discouraged to give it up yet as I don't think I shall. It seems as though the longer I stay in there the more essential the work becomes. We have built many different objects of bricks, and as soon as they were finished we pulled them down. Some of them looked so nicely and neatly finished that I thought it was a pity to pull them down.

Over the Soldiers' home just a little ways north of Hampton Institute a band concert is carried on every Sunday afternoon. It is attended by many of the Hampton students. After finishing my work of going to the jail, I generally get back in time for it.

It is very remarkable to see our

ANDOVER DEFEATS AMHERST

Closest Meet of Year

In the most exciting meet held in the pool this year, the Andover team defeated the Amherst swimmers by a score of 27 to 26, last Saturday. The winner was not determined until the last race, and then Captain "Tom" Fitzgerald by a great spurt that put him in first place in the hundred, gave Andover the five points that meant victory.

The team deserves especial credit for this victory, for not only is Amherst accounted one of the strongest of the college teams, but the Andover fellows were at a disadvantage in two of the six events. In the dive, the Amherst team insisted on having six optionals instead of the two to which our divers were accustomed, and so our divers were forced to try four dives for which they had not practiced. Amherst had a right to insist on six dives, as it is the custom in collegiate meets, but the Andover men were at a disadvantage by it nevertheless, and lost several points. In the 220-yard swim, too, the distance was 20 yards further than our men had been accustomed to swimming, but this did not matter so much, for Nelligan of Amherst maintained a safe lead throughout.

The first event was the relay. Bradley started for Andover against Rider of Amherst. Bradley made one false start and his second start was not as good as Rider's but he outswam the latter by a small margin and gave T. Kingsbury, our second man, a two-yard lead over Jessup, and Kingsbury increased this lead to over four yards. Nelligan of Amherst swam a fine race and cut our lead down to three yards, and then Lemcke, Amherst's last hope, made a great spurt, but failed to catch Fitzgerald, who touched the side of the pool a scant yard in front of his rival.

There was some very good diving. The Amherst men were particularly good in the optionals and it was because of their superiority in those that they won first and second places. Each man took six optionals. The back jack-knife with half twist, the front jack-knife with half twist, the one and a half, the double somersault (backwards and forwards), the Flying Dutchman with full twist, and the full twists were among those selected.

Lemcke won the 50-yard dash in 26 1-5 seconds, finishing a fraction of a foot ahead of Bradley of Andover, who swam a fine race. Fitzgerald took third easily. In the 220-yard swim, Nelligan pulled steadily away from his three competitors, Mayer and Searle of Andover, and Baker of Amherst. At the 100-yard mark Nelligan led by six yards and at the finish he had increased this to nearly ten yards. Mayer and Searle of Andover captured second and third places with ease. In these two events Amherst scored ten points to Andover's eight. The total score at this point was, without the dive, 16 to 10 in favor of Andover.

Strout won the plunge, going 56 feet on his first trial. As he plunged

YALE CLUB TO MEET FRIDAY

The Yale Club will hold its first meeting of the 1914-1915 school year on Friday night, March 5, in the Grill at 6.45. The officers of the Yale Club have been trying to secure speakers to address a meeting to arouse school interest in Yale, but have hitherto been unable to do so because of the lack of organization among the Andover men at Yale. Recently, however, the Andover graduates at Yale have become active and as a result four prominent Yale men will address the meeting in the Grill on Friday evening.

The speakers will include Professor Hollen A. Farr, chairman of the Freshman faculty committee; Chandler Bennett, President of Phi Beta Kappa and stroke of Varsity four last June; J. W. Hanes, member of the Varsity baseball team; N. W. Shedden, captain of the track team.

The meeting will be somewhat informal and will be in the form of a smoker. Cigars and cigarettes will be provided and a "feed" will be an added attraction. Only those who show their tickets or who buy tickets at the door will be admitted.

The officers of the Yale Club realize that Friday is a somewhat inconvenient evening for the fellows, but the Yale men were unable to come on Saturday night for various evenings and so Friday night was selected. The proceedings will start promptly at 6.45 and will probably continue until 8.15 or 8.30, and so those who wish to attend should provide themselves with excuses.

This is the first of a series of Yale smokers and meetings, but there will probably be one more this term and two in the spring.

The officers of the Yale Club are: President, Clifford Rodman, Bishop 13. Vice-President, Francis B. Avery, Phillips 8. Secretary-Treasurer, Maurice S. Gould, Day 23.

Dartmouth Club Meets Saturday Evening

On Saturday evening in the lecture room of the Archaeology building, Mr. Gray Knapp, secretary of Dartmouth College, will give an illustrated talk before the members of the Dartmouth Club and any students who may care to attend. Mr. Knapp graduated in 1912, and since then has been in very close contact with the student body, as his position requires.

Notice

All those wishing to enter a competition for the Phillipian Board extending possibly into the spring term, see Allan V. Heely, Jackson House, immediately.

Meeting of Forum

The subject of the meeting of Forum last Friday evening at Mr. Crawford's was the life of Goldsmith. The discussion was led by Hyde, after which Mr. Crawford spoke. The subject of the discussion the coming Friday will be Kipling's works, and Kunkel will be the leader.

MR. VREELAND AT INQUIRY

Registrar Gives Interesting Talk

Last Sunday evening Mr. Harold Vreeland, Registrar of the Sheffield Scientific School, addressed the Inquiry meeting in the lecture room of the Archaeology building. Mr. Vreeland graduated from Yale two years ago and since that time he has been at Yale in his present position. At college he was prominent in religious activities and those who have attended the Northfield Conferences will remember him as being a very interesting speaker.

The text of his speech was a quotation of Paul's taken from the Bible: "I have fought the good fight, I have finished my course, and I have kept the faith." Mr. Vreeland said that all men have different interests, but the desire to make good in life is in every man. A few men are the leaders, but the vast majority are followers for various reasons. Many of these followers do not make good in preparatory schools, but afterwards in college life stand out above their fellow-graduates as leaders. This change is often due to the chance to begin with a clean slate, and to the new friends and new ideals that have come with college life. Even though some fellows have not made good at school, they should look forward to an opportunity for success in college.

There are two things necessary for success: one is brains, and the other is character. Brains are born in a man, but character is made by each individual for himself. Of these two, character is the most important, for, while many men without brains have a good influence over those around them, no man without character can be a genuine success or a leader of men.

Each one is responsible for his character, which is largely influenced by home surroundings and friends, but even if these are not of the best, they can be overcome with determination. The question that every fellow ought to ask himself is "Have you made good?" If one has been prominent in school activities, it is his character that has placed him in this position. Mr. Vreeland stated that many men are successful at Yale, but to be so, a man must lay the foundations at Andover or other preparatory schools. By making good, it does not necessarily mean that a fellow has to be prominent in athletics and other activities, but the real test of success is in being able to say what Paul did at the end of his life, "I have fought the good fight, I have finished my course, and I have kept the faith."

Seniors are already beginning to look back over the course they have taken at Andover, and wondering if it has been worth while. Some find that it has been a success and others are not so satisfied; for the latter there is still a chance to make good in college if they enter with a definite purpose. The reason that so many fellows fail to make a success of their college course, is that they have no definite purpose in life, and drift around the campus aimlessly, without a thought for the future. The reason why Paul did so much good, and saw numbers influenced by his teaching, was that he had an aim in life and carried it out zealously. In summing up, Mr. Vreeland said that if we wish to succeed in after life, and wish to build up a strong character, we must begin now. Then we may succeed and live a life to be proud of.

THE ANDOVER PRESS

The support given to the Rifle Club is a good illustration of the way in which Phillips Academy and Andover men can back a worthy project. Sentiment in favor of the plan has been practically unanimous throughout the school this year, and the attitude of the Juniors and Junior Middlers proves that the project will not fall through next year because of lack of enthusiasm on their part. But Andover alone cannot furnish the "citizen soldiers" of the entire nation, and it is up to the other academies of the East to follow in the trail which Andover has blazed.

The benefits of rifle-shooting are twofold. First, it is of benefit to the individual—quickness and sureness of eye, steadiness of hand and limb, and coordination between mind and body are all taught and strengthened. And besides securing these untold benefits to his mental and physical being, the student who belongs to the Rifle Club and practices regularly, fits himself to be of service to the nation when the latter needs him. And not only will he be able to fight for his native land, but he will be able to teach his friends and his children the use of army weapons, so that they in their day will be able to protect America.

Therefore, since the benefits to be gained by rifle-shooting are so great to all concerned, and since sentiment for it is so pronounced in Andover, is there not some way in which Andover could show the merits of the project to other schools? In so doing, Andover would be helping others and aiding still further in the development of national military efficiency.

Chapel Address

On Monday morning, at the conclusion of the Chapel exercises, G. H. Durand, Vice-President of Yankton College, South Dakota, delivered a short address. In his talk Mr. Durand told of the life and work of Joseph Ward.

Joseph Ward was a student at Andover from 1857 to 1861, when he graduated. Later he went to the Andover Seminary, in order to complete his education for the ministry. At the close of his career here at Andover, Mr. Ward proceeded to the Dakota territory. At that time that part of the country was practically entirely unsettled, but Mr. Ward saw the opportunity to start a great work, and so, at the head of a congregation of only fourteen people, he started his work. His church prospered to such an extent that to-day he is known as the "Father of the Congregational church in the Dakotas." Mr. Ward saw the value of education, and at Yankton, where his church was situated; he later founded Yankton College, which has accomplished untold good in the West. The college then consisted of only a single two-story frame house, but to-day it possesses many acres and buildings. Mr. Ward also took a great interest in the framing of the Constitution of South Dakota and it was mainly through his efforts that provision was made for setting aside public land for educational purposes. As a result of this clause, South Dakota has one of the most comprehensive educational systems in America. Mr. Ward died after seeing the graduation of the first graduate of Yankton.

After he had concluded this sketch of Joseph Ward's life, Mr. Durand ended his address by telling of the good Yankton had accomplished for Dakota, the West, and the Nation, by educating the foreigners who form sixty per cent of Dakota's total population, as well as the other inhabitants of that state.

Meeting of Philo

Philo will hold its regular weekly meeting this evening in the lecture room of the Archaeology building, at seven o'clock. The question for debate is: Resolved, that the study of Latin and Greek is a needless waste of time. The topic is one that is particularly suitable for discussion in a school or college community. The choice of the question is in line with a plan of Bushnell, the secretary of the society, who plans to have one debate a month on school topics. A. D. Harvey will lead the affirmative side, supported by J. H. Sharpe, while G. P. Murdock, leader, and F. D. Warren, Jr., assistant, will defend the negative.

Alger Sheldon will give the topics of the week, and N. Boynton, Jr., will render the select reading.

The secretary, R. T. Bushnell, has arranged to have material for the debates for the rest of the term set aside in the library each week.

battalion drill. I never realized it until one day when I was on guard. Every day at each meal a number of boys have to walk around the grounds and guard while the others are eating and then the guards go to late meals. The day when I was on guard, I saw the battalion drill and it looked very nice. The battalion drills every day before dinner except Mondays and also from four to five o'clock on Wednesdays.

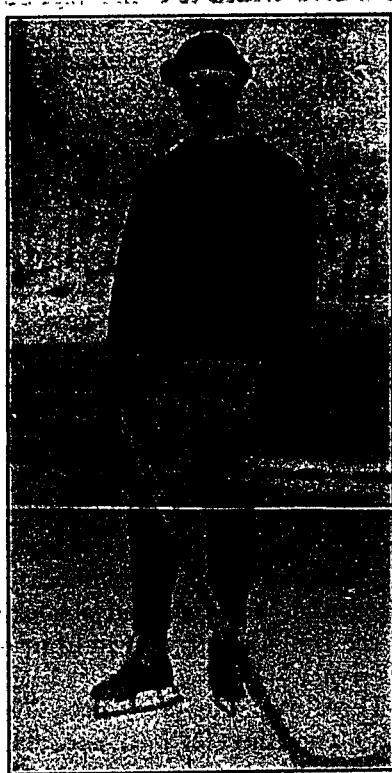

I feel very grateful to you for your kindness of giving me my scholarship last year and I assure you I appreciate it in the highest degree.

A little later on in the season will be time for our track race. I think it will be very successful this year.

Respectfully yours,
E. B. WARD.

Ashley Elected Hockey Captain

At a meeting of the men who won their hockey letters in the Andover-Exeter hockey team, Thomas Woodbury Ashley, of Allston, Mass., was re-elected captain for the coming season. He has won two football letters, playing in the Exeter game both in 1913 and in 1914. He has been on the hockey squad for three years and was captain this year, playing a whirlwind game against Exeter until forced to retire because of an injury to his leg. Ashley was also on the baseball squad last spring, being substitute shortstop. He is 18 years old, 5 feet 5 inches tall, weighs 126 pounds, and has chosen Yale as his future college.

CAPTAIN T. W. ASHLEY

Andover "A" Hats

A good many fellows are curious to know why Andover men, who have won their letter and therefore have received letter hats, invariably wear these hats with the "A" facing the rear. This custom had a very interesting origin.

Many years ago, only those men who won from Exeter in the annual big game in track, football, or baseball, were privileged to have their letter face the rear. Naturally it was then deemed a great privilege to have the letter side of the hat turned backwards. For many years after the origin of this custom, Andover teams trimmed Exeter so regularly that practically all "A" men had the second distinction mark also. And so the custom developed for fellows who have won their "A" to wear it facing the rear in all cases.

Francis W. Getty, P. A. '14, Amherst '18, has been elected captain and director of the Amherst Freshman track team for the coming season.

last and as his record was not beaten, he did not take a second trial. Miller, Amherst, took second, being one foot behind Strout, while Webster, Amherst, took third place away from Bradley by a half-foot margin, going 51 feet.

The 100-yard dash was the most exciting event of the afternoon. Without counting this and the dive, the score stood 21 to 14 in our favor. As it was considered probable that Amherst had taken the first two places in the dive, first place was necessary for us in order to win. Fitzgerald did not get as good a start as Lemcke, and after the latter's fine work in the relay and the fifty, matters looked inauspicious for Andover. Fitzgerald steadily pulled down the speedy Amherst man's lap and passed him on the last lap. Fitzgerald won by about one foot; in the fast time of 1 minute 1 second, and although Amherst won second and third places, Andover now had enough points to insure victory, even though the dive was not counted in this calculation. Fitzgerald swam a wonderful race and deserves great credit for the victory.

The dive was the last event to be announced. As was expected, Ames and Washburn finished first and second for Amherst, while Kingsbury took third. Despite the eight points this gave Amherst, Andover was the final victor by a score of 27 to 26.

TO ANDOVER BOYS:

A great many boys are unable to make progress in large classes. This is usually due to the lack of early training which prevents a proper understanding of each day's lesson or to absence from classes because of illness, etc.
For the above reasons a number of boys are compelled to leave Phillips Andover Academy each year. To these boys we offer an opportunity to make up work in which they are deficient and return to Andover. By our methods of private tutoring and small class instruction, such boys can be advanced rapidly. We are well situated at Tarrytown-on-the-Hudson, where we can accommodate twenty-five boys and fifteen masters.

and the fellows will use this for practice on a short range, from 50 to 75 feet. This will be most interesting and easy work and will afford an opportunity for inter-group or inter-class competitions. When the Club members show a mastery over this simpler work, they will be taken to the rifle range in Frye Village, a mile from the Square, where they will start practicing upon the 200 to 300-yard range of the state militia. Here, not only will firing at longer range be taught, but also the way to allow for windage and other physical conditions. Later, when there is a marked proficiency shown at this range, the Club will start practice upon the longer and more difficult range at Wakefield.

At all these ranges the fellows will be taught how to shoot from a standing, sitting or prone position and with and without a rest. At Wakefield, rapid firing, at a silhouette figure, will be shown. "Silhouette firing," as it is called, consists of shooting at the shadow of a human figure cast upon the target, which disappears at minute intervals. A good rapid-fire shot can hit this figure ten, or even twelve times within a minute.

In conclusion, Lieut. Stockton explained that he would be able to teach only the rudiments, as the time left in the school year and the time at his command each week, were both short. He said that he was conducting this work in addition to his regular work and consequently could not give the project his undivided attention, but he thought that, by diligent application, the Seniors could all learn how to shoot an army rifle fairly well, and that the Middlers could get such a foundation as to enable them to become good marksmen next year.

Musical Clubs to Give Concert at Bradford Academy

The combined musical clubs will make a trip to Bradford Academy Saturday evening, where they will give a concert, which will be followed by an informal reception. This is the first time for several years that the clubs have gone to Bradford, and it is expected that the trip will prove very successful and entertaining.

Forty-Eighth Annual Contest

The forty-eighth annual speaking of original compositions for the Means Prizes of twenty, ten, and five dollars, will be held on Saturday evening, March 6, at 8 o'clock. Mr. Stearns will preside and the following will serve as the Committee of Award:

Mr. George H. Browne of the Browne & Nichols School, chairman; Mr. Samuel F. Holmes of Worcester Academy, and Mr. Geo. C. Greener, Director of the North Bennett Street Industrial School, Boston.

The judges have already read the compositions and given them a two-thirds grade. The final third will be added for delivery. Members of the English Department have pronounced the essays far above the average for a number of years past. A Saturday night has been chosen for the contest this year in the hope that many more students will be present to support the contestants.

The following are the speakers in their order, with their subjects.

- Max Wagner
The Movement for Nationwide Prohibition
- Raymond F. Beardsley
