

HOCKEY AND TRACK SQUADS START DRIVE FOR WINTER TERM

Captains Hammer, Reilly, Sheridan
Lead Large Squads In Conditioning

TRACK

Under the guidance of Coach Ray Shepard and his assistants, Bernie Boyle, Ed Flanagan, and Professor Watt, the track team has begun light drill work to get the boys into shape. No heavy strain is being laid on the trackmen, as most of them are not in good condition.

Already, however, those who promise to give an outstanding performance have shown up well. In the 40-yard dash Mr. Shepard has been sizing up the candidates with work on starts and stride. No constructive drills or work calculated to improve their form has begun earnestly as yet. Throckmorton and Hudner seem to be the most promising of those several intermediate sprinters. Perhaps there is some hitherto unrecognized talent yet to be discovered.

Conditioning in 300

In the 300, as in most of the other events, work on pace and stride have been started to get the men in form. None of the fine points have been considered. Siegel, Hudner, and Shepley seem to be the leaders in the 300 group. An interesting sidelight of the 40 and 300 is the rivalry between last year's Junior star, Joe Sobin, and this year's "find" in the Junior class, Bob Black. From here it looks as if Black will win the 300, but Joe, displaying a vast improvement in form over last year, will hold his own in the dash.

In the jumping events, Carr and Coffin seem to be showing up well in the high jump. In the pole vault Co-Capt. Sheridan is planning his road to stellar vaulting. His form is as good as ever, and, right now, the sky is the limit. Assisting him will be Bensley, Bixby, Rockwell, and Hessey. Work has not yet gotten far enough under way in the broad jump to make any observations at present. Turning to the hurdles now, we find Mr. Throck-

HOCKEY

Because of the extra facilities that are being offered this year, the hockey players have high hopes for the future. Under the newly-elected captain, Sledge Hammer, the team gathered in front of the Cage last Monday afternoon and discussed plans. It was announced at that time that Varsity hockey would be divided into three squads, each having its own schedule. All the cuts have not yet been made; however, everyone will be able to compete, at least in the clubs.

Many Lettermen

This year the first team is fortunate to have an abundant crop of returning last year's lettermen. This group is led by Captain Hammer, Cliff Stevens, Gil Kittredge, and Bernie Welch. Also returning from last year's squad are Charlie Knapp and Norm Barrett. George Warren, who was forced out of the line-up last season because of an injury, is back, and will probably see some action in some of the coming games. Coaches Knight and Leavitt also have high hopes for the various Junior Varsity veterans who have been promoted.

Last spring a group of people interested in hockey here at Andover, started a big drive for better facilities. This drive was not to no avail. Last Monday nearly two hundred boys showed up ready for action, and none will be denied the right to play the sport. Aside from the Varsity games, there will be a regular intra-club competition. As soon as Rabbit Pond freezes, two, or possibly three, rinks will be set up there. In addition to this, the old rink behind the track will see plenty of action as the practice ground for the Varsity.

All the players are now eagerly awaiting the first ice. For the past week they have had to practice their plays on dry land. However, cold weather is in sight, and their

Successful Air-Raid Drill Conducted In Paul Revere Hall

Running smoothly like a well-oiled machine, Wednesday, November 26th, a fire drill was carried out in near perfection by the seniors living in Mr. van der Stucken's side of Paul Revere last Wednesday evening. Uniformed, steel-helmeted wardens assisted the housemaster in clearing the story building in a little over the minute. In an effort to add pep and efficiency to the fire drill system, an excellently trained house evacuated the hall in one-half the time expected by the Andover Fire Department.

Shortly before 10 p. m., two school bells, kindly lent to the wardens by Mr. Cannon, as all bells are now unobtainable because of priorities (the Andover Fire Department needs a bell for one of its trucks but cannot obtain it) roused the 26 Seniors out of their beds. Dressing quickly in warm clothing, they quickly walked down the two fire escapes to the appointed meeting place near Morse Hall. There the roll was called, and all were found to be present. The period from the first ringing of the warning bell to the conclusion of the reading of the roll was about one and a half minutes. It had been estimated by the wardens that it would take three minutes to evacuate the building. Considering Paul Revere's large number of boys and its added story, this record represents an excellent performance by wardens and boys alike.

Mr. van der Stucken, housemaster and division officer, called a meeting of all students at nine o'clock. There the boys voted to have only two wardens, and expressed their desire to hold the drill that night, as it would least interfere with their studies. Chief Warden Frederick Sontag then explained the evening's program, and Mr. van der Stucken added extra information to what he had already said. The wardens were dressed in khaki uniforms, and wearing steel helmets which Senior Vice Commander Edward Northam of the Andover American Legion had very kindly supplied. The helmets had large white W's painted on them, as had the wardens' khaki shirts. Each warden also had a whistle and a flashlight. All these things, uniforms, helmets, etc., the chief warden had obtained on his own, feeling that the drill would seem much more realistic if the wardens were properly uniformed as in England.

Then the bells rang. Bells were used, as the rattles promised by Faculty Defense Coordinator Leonard F. James had not arrived. Neither had the arm bands. Boys left their rooms with windows shut to prevent an inflow of oxygen, and doors open to tell the wardens that the occupants had left. All proceeded downstairs in a quick tempo, marked by the absence of running that creates panic. Downstairs the boys passed quickly out of the building, their rear covered

Margaret Bourke-White Talks On Russia, China

Sunday Preacher

Tomorrow, the sermon will be delivered by the Rev. A. Graham Baldwin, school minister. In keeping with his purpose of speaking on the phrases found in the Lord's prayer, his sermon will be "Lead Me Not Into Temptation." Following the service, Dr. Pfatteicher will resume his organ recitals on the works of Bach.

PHILO LEARNS OF DEBATING TRICKS

In the Bulfinch debating room last Wednesday, Dr. MacKendrick spoke on the subject, "Dishonest Tricks Commonly Used in Argument, With the Methods of Overcoming Them." His audience consisted of twelve students and two faculty members. As the lecture was not concluded at this meeting, only half of the material having been discussed, Dr. MacKendrick will use next Thursday's session to complete his talk. The purpose of the lecture is largely to instruct the debaters on the methods of destroying "dishonest" arguments used by their opponents.

Emotionally Toned Words

The first trick discussed was the "Use of emotionally toned words." In this instance, as well as many other times throughout the lecture, Dr. MacKendrick illustrated and supplemented his talk with quotations and anecdotes from "How to Think Straight," by Robert Henry Thouless. "Emotionally toned words," such as "bloated capitalist," "German ruthlessness," "British heroism," "nigger," "Bolshevik," etc., appeal solely to the emotions of the listener, and have no facts or logical reasoning behind them. The method used in combating such "dishonest arguments" is to ask your opponent to explain his statements in clear, unemotional terms. This will often expose his phrases as worthless and misleading from the factual point of view.

Two other very important instances are "making statements in which 'all' is implied, but 'some' is true," and "the use of syllogism with undistributed middle term." In these cases one argument might be as follows: "All Communists are radicals; all C. I. O. men are radicals; therefore C. I. O. men are Communists." An examination of the statement shows that this is not correct reasoning. It is "dishonest." The falsehood lies in the fact that not ALL C. I. O. men are

ANDOVER DELEGATION GOES TO NORTHFIELD

On Wednesday afternoon the students who signed up to accompany the Andover delegation to the annual Northfield Religious Conference, met at Mr. Baldwin's house. At that meeting plans and arrangements were made and discussed for the pilgrimage.

The delegation will be composed of three masters, Mr. Follansbee, Mr. Lewis, and Mr. Pieters, as well as the following boys: Phil Drake, W. Haymond, Tom Haymond, S. Northrop, Luce Biglow, Ray Cuthbertson, Howard Weaver, Norman Barrett, Bob Hatch, Carter Bacon, Bill Mettler.

The group will leave Andover on Friday after lunch, and will return from the religious conference on Sunday.

Took First Photo Of Joseph Stalin After War Started

Last night, in the meeting room of George Washington Hall, which was packed to capacity, Mr. Paradise as head of the Andover Lecture Bureau, introduced charming Miss Margaret Bourke-White to an expectant audience which had come to hear the most famous woman photographer in the world talk on "Lenses Behind the News." "Miss Bourke-White," said Mr. Paradise, "has the rare talent of being able to combine in her pictures 'beauty, symmetry, and social significance.'"

Previous Andover Visit

Immediately catching the interest of her audience, Miss Bourke-White started by saying that she had previously visited Andover in 1933, and that because of President Roosevelt's bank holiday she had arrived by bus and had worn to the lecture some clothes that were hastily scraped together by stylist Mr. Paradise. She then began in earnest the story of her trek halfway around the world in the company of her author husband, Erskine Caldwell.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Caldwell left America in the early spring of last year to go to Russia because they both had a hunch that it would be there that the scene of war would soon shift. Well supplied with six hundred pounds of photographic equipment, the two adventurers arrived in the interior of China after brief stops at Hongkong and Chungking. About Chinese food, Miss White said that no matter what she or her husband ordered they always received stewed chicken. After a quick airplane trip over the Gobi desert, with brief landings for sandstorms, Mr. Caldwell, his wife, and the photographic equipment, all none the worse for wear, arrived in a Moscow that had changed much since their last visit.

For one thing, the streets that had been in the midst of construction in 1932, were now completely finished, and they were wider than many of our larger New York avenues. Modern office buildings had

Badminton Club To Start Soon

Last week it was announced that a new Badminton Club would be formed. The club is being formed by a group of boys interested in badminton, and it is hoped that it may become a regular sport.

The group intends to play on the two available courts in the Cage. As their play would interfere with the tracksters, some of whom begin athletics at 1:30, the boys are at present in difficulties as to the time of their playing.

As badminton would be considered as an activity as well as a sport, the group is hoping to be able to start playing at 1:40 during activities hour. For at that time only the trackmen out for the weights would be working, and these would not be disturbed by the badminton players. This suggestion is now being studied by the faculty.

If these plans go through, with the needed co-operation of those students interested in the forming of the badminton club, it is hoped that a suitable number will sign up.

Just In Case

ALTHOUGH, at this moment, the war in Europe is three thousand miles from American shores, the U. S. A., by openly sending aid to Great Britain and Russia, is engaged in an undeclared war against all forces of tyranny and oppression. Should the actual fighting ever be carried to this country, the civilian population must be well trained in the science of home defense. By training its students in fire prevention, red cross, and air-raid precaution, Andover is taking the lead in this particular type of education.

Although a great deal of fun has been made of the Fire Wardens and their practice drills, no one has really stopped to think what would happen in an undisciplined dormitory if a fire of major proportions broke out. If windows were not closed immediately, the fire would soon get out of hand and spread to other houses on the hill. If a definite order for exit was not established beforehand, there would undoubtedly be a panic which would result in someone's being left in the burning building. If the need for fire education should not arise, and we hope it never does, it will at least teach members of the student body where the campus fire-alarms are located.

A knowledge of the elementary forms of first aid is one of the most valuable things that a person can possess in the time of war. It is a well-known fact that in the first war literally thousands upon thousands of soldiers and civilians lost their lives because people attending them had no idea of what to do for the patient until he could be taken to a hospital. It is not the purpose of the Red Cross class here at school to teach anyone the fine points of medicine, but merely to give as many students as possible a general education in bandaging, etc., so that they will not be totally ignorant in the time of crisis.

Although the need for air-raid precaution seems rather slight at Andover, it might well become a stark reality if the German brand of warfare was ever transferred from the continent to the United States. Being in a strategic position on the Atlantic coastline, Andover would have the main responsibility for spotting any enemy aircraft should they ever come this way.

This Andover

The first man to follow in the footsteps of Compton, Follansbee, Shields, and Boyle in promoting better relations with the students, is Mr. Benedict. Since our last issue, he has been excusing his classes at the end of the hours with the mystic phrase, "We part in radiant contentment." Now that the English Department has fallen in line, we hope that it will spread further, perhaps even to Samuel Phillips Hall. A movement like this should not be confined to Morse and Bulfinch.

In his expedition to the Organ Pipes, Bill-Coffin was the first Andover man to endorse Ever-ready Batteries as having saved his life. Now, running on the back covers of certain popular magazines is a signed advertisement by Charles McCarthy, a P. A. Alumnus, and survivor of the Zamzam disaster, that Ever-ready Batteries were the main factor in the rescue of the sinking Egyptian ship's passengers and crew. Mr. McCarthy was on his way to the war zone to be an ambulance driver when a German raider put an end to the Zamzam.

We hear that the gym office was crowded with in the last few days with boys trying to sign up for Badminton as their winter sport. We know of one senior who signed up in the hope of being made captain. All this arose from a mysterious notice in Wednesday's Phillipian, announcing that a Badminton club was being formed, and that boys could take it as their winter athletics. Mr. Peck, spokesman for the athletic department, informs us that no such arrangement was made, and that he has never heard of the Badminton Club. We apologize for somebody else's boner.

The other day we saw one of our friends sit down to study. He put on a strange looking hat, filled with protruding wires and coils. Then he plugged himself into the wall, and mechanism in the headgear began to hum. Blue lights flashed on and off. Occasionally a red sign flashed on: "Danger: 135 Brainwaves per second." All this time, the guy just sat there, reading. Finally we broke down.

"Huh?" we said.

"Oh," he said, "This is just the Automatic Memorizer. Patent Pending. They're selling them at the bookstore."

He handed me a little advertising post card. Some of you may have seen them around. They are being mailed to various people in the school. Printed in flagrant red ink, they read:

Tonight's Film

Following "Confessions of a Nazi Spy" and "The Man I Married," Warner Bros. latest picture depicting inside Nazi Germany, "Underground" is brought to us tonight at 7:30 in George Washington Hall. Definitely the best picture of its kind, its starring roles are portrayed by Jeffrey Lynn, Phillip Dorn, one of last year's greatest finds, straight from his success in "Escape," and Karen Vern, a foreigner, who has certainly proved her worth in Hollywood. Although it might be called a "propaganda picture," "Underground," clearly shows conditions inside Germany.

Briefly, the plot concerns the resentment of a group of people toward Hitler and his party, and the way in which they bring to the home-loving Germans the true facts of Germany's real position. We have Mr. Lynn and Mr. Dorn as two brothers, the former being a Nazi lieutenant, and the latter a fifth columnist inside Germany and leader of the underground movement. At the beginning of the picture we find Mr. Lynn returning from war to Berlin, having had an arm shot off in France. Unknown to him and of course his family, his brother has for some time been engaging in undercover activities. Mr. Lynn then meets a girl who, also unknown to him, is a member of the underground organization. As is always the case he falls in love with her, much to the disagreement of his brother, who feels that he might discover his real profession.

Sport Shots

With winter fast approaching, the football season virtually ends today except for the Bowl clashes on New Year's day. Big game of the day is at Philadelphia, where the traditional Army vs. Navy encounter takes place. Navy has been tied once, 0-0, by Harvard and beaten by Notre Dame, 13-7. Its most impressive victory is a 13-7 triumph over mighty Penn. Army, on the other hand, suffered a 20-6 defeat by Harvard, held Notre Dame to a scoreless deadlock, and lost to Penn, 14-7. On both its record and ability, Navy deserves the edge. The Middies have two fine offensive backs in Busick and Clark and an excellent quarterback in Harrell. Most important of all, Navy has a powerful line which can hold the enemy in check and open huge holes for Messrs. Busick and Clark to romp through. The Middies are strong in reserves and potent in the air with such able passers as "Bullet Bill" Busick, Howie Clark, and left-handed Bob Woods. The Navy men will be playing their last game for their popular coach "Swede" Larson, who has been ordered to a different post by the naval authorities. In his two contests with Army, Larson has a perfect record, and his boys will go all out to see that its three straight for the Swede.

For Army, Coach Red Blaik will be finishing up his first season as head coach there. Blaik is a precision coach, who specializes in the deep Pitt reverse and the running pass. The Army backfield is capable of operating this system, but the Gray are rather weak in the line. Thus both Harvard and Penn were able to down Army only by their superior lines. Army will certainly find it a tough proposition to handle the powerful Navy line, one of the best in the country. But Army's backs are likely to break away at any time for a score. Mazur, Hill, Mauphin, and Hatch are the stalwarts of the cadet backfield. The latter is a veteran of two campaigns, a powerful line-plunger and a steady all-around ballplayer. Mauphin, a dangerous runner, has been out a good part of the season with injuries, but Hill, his alternate, has toted the melon on many a successful Pitt reverse, and has been on the receiving end of quite a few of Hank Mazur's scintillating passes. Mazur is the sparkplug of the Army eleven. A brilliant passer, and a great broken-field runner, he'll give the Middies plenty of headaches.

Army's chances depend upon deception and passing. Since the Cadets cannot hope to gain through the Middle line, they'll go around and over it. Army is a dangerous breakaway team; that is, they're liable to score one quick, startling thrust. For example, trailing 6-0 to West Virginia in the third quarter last week, Army put Mazur in the tailback spot with the ball near the mid-field stripe. Hank faded back with the ball, and suddenly fired a 52-yard pass to Ralph Hill on the goal-line for a spectacular score; to win the game 7-6. Navy will do the marching today, Army will try the ends and take to the air. With good weather it should be a fine ball game with the Middies triumphing about 20-13.

In other games today Clemson should take Auburn, Boston College will down Holy Cross, Fordham will triumph over N. Y. U., Georgia ought to defeat Georgia Tech, Mississippi will vanquish Mississippi State, Pitt will trounce Carnegie Tech, Oklahoma will set back Nebraska, Rice will conquer Baylor, Tulane should trim L. S. U., Texas Christian will edge Southern Methodist, Vanderbilt will take Tennessee, Stanford should defeat California, Washington will down Southern Cal., Penn. State should beat South Carolina, and Oregon State should win the honor of representing the West in the Rose Bowl by defeating Oregon.

Before forgetting football for a while let's see what's what in the Bowl situation. This observer figures that Oregon State will meet Duke in the Rose Bowl. In the Sugar Bowl it will be Texas vs. Fordham, in the Orange Bowl, Vanderbilt vs. Duquesne, and in the Cotton Bowl, Texas A and M vs. Missouri.

Splatter

We were amazed no end when we learned the other day that president Scott and Vice-president Raymond of the bird-banding club are both "excellent at attaching tags onto animals legs." This is an accomplishment that cannot easily be sniffed at.

Dick Duden, who scored first for us in the Exeter football game, won a $3.00 shirt, offered by the Langrock shop, for guessing the Andover man who would make the first touchdown.

Andover....

....Biography

Ebenezer Pemberton

Ebenezer Pemberton, the second headmaster of Phillips Andover, was a man whose character was in strong contrast to that of his predecessor, Eliphalet Pearson. He was "mild, gentle, conciliatory, and kind, inspiring affection and exciting neither fear nor awe, while he preserved and supported discipline, he made himself beloved and respected by his pupils," according to Josiah Quincy. He sacrificed a great deal for this school, but has never been considered as ranking among the greatest of the headmasters at Andover. He suffered a continuous weakness of health and body which accounts in some measure for his lack of complete success.

Ebenezer Pemberton was born in Newport, R. I., in 1747. His father, Ebenezer Pemberton, was minister of the Old South Church in Boston. He attended Princeton University, from which he graduated as valedictorian of his class in 1765. After his graduation he acted as a tutor at Princeton, and among his students were Aaron Burr and James Madison.

Early Career

His wealthy uncle desired the young Ebenezer become a minister, but he himself was opposed to this measure. As a result, his uncle refused him any further financial support and Pemberton now had to shift for himself. Around the year 1778 he became Principal of the Academy in Plainfield, Conn. after he had completed a course in theology with the Rev. Samuel Hopkins.

Because of the reputation he established as a teacher in Plainfield Judge Phillips determined to appoint him to the position of Principal in Andover. However, Pemberton refused an appointment to life because of his poor health; hence he made the reservation that he be allowed to retire on three months' notice.

Andover Under Pemberton

Principal Pemberton's reign at Andover was neither tyrannical nor exceedingly mild. Under him Andover progressed at a normal pace. His regime was marked by strict discipline and strict adherence to the religious aspects of school life. During the period of his principality the school was given a sum of more than $20,000 by Dr. Joel Phillips in 1789. Also in 1789 George Washington, on tour through the Eastern states, visited Andover. The two events are probably the most outstanding at this time in the history of the school.

Pemberton led a vigorous and scholarly life at Andover which impaired his health. Finally, in 1793 because of his infirmities, he was forced to retire. His successor was Mark Newman.

Death

Although Pemberton led a life of ill-health, he died at a "ripe old age"—89, on June 25, 1835. He represents the delicate scholarly type of person who, through his efforts did much for the development and progress of Andover. Today Pemberton Cottage stands in memory of an aggressive, mild, yet stern, Ebenezer Pemberton, second headmaster of Phillips Academy.

LATIN PLAYERS PRACTICE METER

Under the direction of Dr. Westgate, the Latin players are rehearsing their lines daily during the activities period. Many boys have been assigned to Mr. MacSporn or Mr. Colby who will act as the coaches. At present, reciting and learning of lines and rudiments of scansion are being stressed. At the end of the month, it is hoped that a voice recording of every boy's part will be made.

The stage crew, under the direction of Mr. Woolsey, will soon become active. All those interested in construction, painting, poster making, props, and lighting are asked to see him and become a member of that elite group of Latin workers.

GALLERY EXHIBITS LARGE PHOTOGRAMS

At present, the Addison Gallery of Art is conducting exhibits of a wide and interesting nature. The one which has aroused the most interest and curiosity concerns the making of "Photograms." Wednesday morning the student body was challenged with, "Can you take a picture without the use of a camera?" Public opinion, in general, tended to the negative, but the exhibit in the basement of the Gallery proves it can be done.

A "Photogram" is a study, primarily, in lights and shadows. The picture is the product of a chemically treated paper on which light and darkness leave their impressions. On a series of eighteen explanatory panels the Chicago School of Design, which lent the material to Andover, shows the process of "taking a Photogram" what effect can be achieved. One of the most interesting branches of Photogram making is that one can "draw with light." In other words, by using a flashlight with an intense beam on the chemically treated paper in a dark room, one can draw as with a pencil, the result being white on black.

Two exhibits of local interest may be found on the first floor of the Addison Gallery. Chosen pictures from the collection of photographs by Margaret Bourke-White, who lectured here last evening, are of special interest. Her group of pictures entitled, "Say, Is This America?" are excellent studies in various phases of American life. Also on the first floor there may be found an "exhibition and sale

LARGE CUT HELD IN BASKETBALL

Furman, Duden, Vose
Star In Practice

With a large number of returning lettermen ready for action, the basketball team is looking forward to what has every indication of being a highly successful season. Captain Bob Furman and Dick Duden, both of whom were stars on last year's squad, are among the standouts. Furman will hold down the center position, while Duden, who made such a great showing last winter, will play forward. Another forward is Vinny McKernin, who is now beginning his third year on the P. A. Varsity. Also returning are Elly Vose, John Macintyre, and Poppy Bush, who managed last year's aggregation.

New Material

Besides the returning lettermen, there are a large number of veterans of last winter's Junior Varsity squad who promise to see plenty of action on the Varsity this year. Leading them is Gene Williams, who has shown his ability in the past. Also promising are Bill Mark, Bill Stiles, and Mace Thompson. There is also a large group of Upper Middlers, all of whom, though they won't all necessarily make the first team this year, assure a strong Andover squad in 1942-43. Among these are Roy Ferguson, Ben Hammer, Bill Chipman, Charlie Arnold, and Ed Weigold.

Junior Varsity

Coach Di Clementi also has high hopes for the J. V. squad. Tuck Asbury, Dave Toll, and George Etelson, the stars of last year's club teams, will probably be the standouts. There are also a number of promising looking preps.

On Monday, when the candidates first started practice, ninety-five boys showed up. However, because of the limited facilities, a cut was necessary. Mr. Di Clementi held several scrimmages last Wednesday afternoon, in which the inferior players were weeded out. The group is now down to sixty-five. When everything is organized, the coaches plan to retain twelve men on the Varsity, the same number on the Junior Varsity, and about ten men on each of the club squads.

New Schedule

Because of the moving of the gym class to Graves Hall, more time will be allotted to basketball this winter. Last year the Varsity didn't come on the floor till 3:15, and even then they had to share the court with the J. V.'s. However, this season the clubs will start earlier, and hereby leave more time for the Varsity.

Although everything is still in the preliminary stage, practice will swing into its regular tempo this coming week. Because of the more than usual number of promising returning men, P. A. is now looking forward to an exceptional season. The outside games will start shortly after Christmas vacation.

Defense Sale Lagging

This notice is to serve as a reminder to the student body that the sale of defense stamps in the Commons has lately been lagging more than it really should. The school administration does not want to force anyone into buying stamps, although it would like to make clear the fact that, as a defense measure, the sale of these stamps is almost as important as air-raid precaution and fire control. The need is a continuing one, and all purchases will be greatly appreciated.

Mirror Promises Big Fall Issue

With publication date only a week and a half away, the "Mirror's" editorial staff is busily engaged in the process of selecting and editing material. As yet they are willing to make no definite statements as to exactly what material will be chosen, but they do promise a complete and detailed preview of the issue in next Saturday's Phillipian.

Contributions have been good, both in quality and quantity. The editors have not been "snowed under," as they put it, but they have had some excellent material to choose from. A great many of the articles have special merit, and it will be very hard to decide who is to receive the Headmaster's prize.

The art department, however, seems to be almost monopolized by Art Editor Sam Rogers. Very few boys have tried to design either covers or cartoons, with the result that Sam has had to do most of the work himself. It is also rumored that Sam is dabbling in the field of poetry, but the editors refuse to reveal to what extent the muse has affected an otherwise good artist.

The editors were especially profuse in their praise of the business board. For the first time in the memory of the oldest student, said they, the business department shows signs of having to buy some black ink. With this sound financial backing, the Mirror may later be able to undertake more extensive enterprises.

NEW EXHIBIT OPENS AT ADDISON GALLERY

Last Friday an exhibition entitled "Regional Building in the United States" opened at the Addison Art Gallery. The exhibit comes from the Museum of Modern Art in New York and will last through December 15.

The exhibition deals with the different materials that make up the building as well as with different types of architecture. Quite a few developments in construction and design are exhibited. There are large numbers of miniature model houses included, many of them by some of the foremost designers in the country.

Margaret Bourke-White

sprung up, and in the show windows of stores there was now a goodly quantity of things to buy; chocolates, too, were in evidence. According to Miss White, who spoke directly to many of the Russian people, the non-aggression pact with Germany did not prevent most of the Russians from sympathizing with the British cause against the Nazis. To the graduating class of the military school in Moscow Joseph Stalin had said, "Germany is your real enemy."

Always moving toward the front, which was their main objective, the Caldwelles were on the shore of the Black Sea when, through the loudspeaker of the small village in which they were staying, they heard the inevitable words of Litvinoff, "We are now officially at war with Nazi Germany." Even at this statement the tension in Russia did not altogether dissolve. Through the cities and towns ran the most important question of all, "Where does Great Britain stand?"

A direct result of Prime Minister Churchill's speech in behalf of the Russian cause was a tremendous surge in patriotism everywhere. Everybody in Moscow, where Miss Bourke-White and her husband were now stationed, wanted to help in some way. Girls volunteered to take men's jobs in factories, and young men were straining to see action at the front.

Miss White's biggest assignment on her Moscow itinerary was to obtain a human, unposed picture of dictator Stalin. After much red tape she at last received official permission and was ushered by secret service men to a large room, in the middle of which was standing Mr. Stalin, rigid and ill at ease. It was pointed out by the lecturer that, regardless of what anyone has heard, Joseph Stalin is not a big man. He is five feet, five inches; just a shade taller than the person who took his picture.

Miss White and her husband have spent most of their free time in getting reacquainted with their native land, which, in the words of Miss White, is becoming more and more secure from attack with every German plane that is shot down by the Russians.

radicals; SOME C. I. O. men are radicals. Therefore a truthful statement containing logical reasoning would be "All Communists are radical; SOME C. I. O. men are radicals; therefore SOME C. I. O. men are Communists." This false type of reasoning is countered by proving that using "all" makes the statement untrue, and that "some" is really meant.

Another important "dishonest argument" is "evading a sound rebuttal of an argument by using a sophistic formula," in other words, making statements based solely upon a premise or assumption which you make, and attempt to force upon your opponents and your audience.

Other "dishonest arguments" are "diverting the arguments from the main issue by drawing a 'red herring' across the trail," and "proof by an argument which does not follow (non definition)." The latter means saying that since "A" is true, "B" must also be true, when actually "A" and "B" have no connection. Also, recommending a position as being the "mean between two extremes." "Arguing in a circle," "Begging the Question" (assuming that which you are attempting to prove), "Suggestion by use of a confident manner," "Suggestion by prestige, by false credentials, and by use of the technical jargon." These last few are all to increase the debater's prestige, and make him appear an authority on the subject being debated. In addition to the above-listed "dishonest arguments," many others will be explained next Thursday Monday afternoon's debate is: "Resolved, That All War Industries Be Taken Over by the Government."

prayers should soon be answered. Once the team gets started, it promises to move along rapidly. As many of the stars who helped win the games last year are back, the squad is all set to duplicate last year's trouncing of the Red and Gray come February. The regular outside games will start shortly after Christmas.

Fire Drill

by a fire hose that one of the wardens had unhooked.

Once outside, the Seniors quickly proceeded to the back of Morse Hall. There Chief Warden Sontag called the roll, and reported to Mr. van der Stucken that all were accounted for. Mr. van der Stucken then dismissed the Seniors, and officially then ended the fire drill for that night. The roll-call that was read was a new "scientific" roll-call devised by the British wardens. It is not alphabetical, nor does it go by room numbers, but it begins with the boys whose rooms are in the greatest danger, which is the top floor. The roll-call goes from the top story to the ground floor. The purpose of calling the boys in the danger zone first is that if they do not answer present at the roll-call, a warden may be sent to arouse them from their slumbers.

This drill marks the climax of a number of similar drills held throughout the Academy. In Foxcroft Hall one boy ran outside without shoes. In the Paul Revere drill no boy was checked in unless properly clothed. Some drills have been run through in a very unsatisfactory fashion, but the Paul Revere drill showed that the Senior class took the fire drill practices seriously, and co-operated to the utmost. The only event that marred a near perfect evening for wardens and boys alike was the failure of the photographer, who was to record this drill for history, to arrive. Undoubtedly the success of the drill lay in the co-operation of the undergraduates, and the excellence and alertness of the wardens. The uniforms proved very popular, while the efforts of the wardens to obtain their own equipment won the praise of Mr. van der Stucken. This drill will stand as an example to the other houses and halls for a long time to come.

Dramatic Club Rehearses Daily

The Andover Dramatic Club has been steadily progressing in its casting and set planning for the coming club production, "The Valiant," directed by Mr. Cochran. There have been several meetings of the club, at which a tentative cast was chosen, and some rough plans made for the set. Some of the minor properties are being scouted for, though most of them are easy to find, and would be easy to secure.

The play is somewhat different from the last, and more closely resembles the play "Submerged" in its terseness and melodramaticness. The title, of course, suggests the type of character which plays the lead, but the scene is rather unexpected.

Mr. Woolsey, whose stage crew worked so well to construct the unique set, which added so much to the play, "If Men Played Cards as Women Do," has called a meeting of all men who desire to "come out" for this play to aid the crew, or, perhaps, replace them.

WOODWORKING CLUB ADDS TO EQUIPMENT

The Woodworking Club has recently acquired a new sander. This new addition to the shop's already excellent array of power tools makes the shop unusually complete.

An almost unlimited number of projects is made possible by the club's equipment; the members are, in fact, engaged in a relatively large number of projects. The club so far has not participated in any group activities; this has meant that the members are free to work on their own jobs in the shop.

The shop is open to all the students. It is not necessary to join any club or pay any money; all may use the shop and its tools. Several times a week incipient wood workers inquire as to what they have to join to use the shop. Nothing is the answer. The only prerequisite to the use of the shop is that you know and practice the proper use of the tools. Mr. James will be glad to give brief instruction to this department. The school does not want anyone to injure himself or the tools in the shop. A master must be present when the shop is in use.

GRAPPLERS AIDED BY NEW "PREPS"

As a large number of boys have showed interest, Coach Carlson's wrestling team has high hopes of carrying through a successful season. Leading the squad will be Captain Al McNulty, the talented 128 pounder. Other returning men are George White in the 165 pound class, Chuck Ashley in the unlimited class, 135-pounder Dick Moody, and Ray Young in the 121-pound class.

Besides the large number of veterans, the team is fortunate to have an abundance of promising preps. Among these are Bud Scott, Kohlhas, Perk Perkins, Rogoski, and Kaiser. The team has been practicing regularly in Graves Hall since last Monday. Because of the large size of the turnout, Coaches Carlson and Pieters are considering running the practice sessions in three shifts. First, the boys who have 4:22 classes will practice, then the Varsity, and then the fellows whose schedule permits them to come out between 3:45 and 4:30.

Through the club system, the coaches hope to prepare men for next year's first teams. Last year the grapplers had only a mediocre season, closing with a smashing defeat at the hands of Exeter. However, this year the team looks pretty good, and those concerned have high hopes for the future. The regular competition with outside schools will start shortly after the Christmas vacation.

of drawings, prints, and jewelry." No article is priced higher than $10, and one or two are as low as $1.50.

On the top floor three exhibits lent by the Museum of Modern Art in New York are of especial interest. A series of photographs and models demonstrating architecture and design in the T. V. A. projects show the construction of dams, power plants, and other buildings in that region. The type of housing, built for use and durability, presents information on the trends of American industrial design.

The two remaining exhibits concern "Regional Building in America" and "The Manufacture of Modern Furniture." The former illustrates, in a series of photographs, the predominating types of houses in various sections of the country. The latter exhibit illustrates through actual pieces of material the contents, process construction, and design in modern furniture. All together, anyone may easily spend an enjoyable and educational hour roaming about the Addison Gallery investigating these six noteworthy exhibits.

morton looking fine, and Wally Cahners not doing so bad for himself either. These two ought to pace the way to points in forthcoming meets.

Work on the longer runs, the 600 and 1,000, has not yet gotten into full swing. Of course, in the latter of these, Co-Capt. Reilly will lead the way. Johnny David, sensational little man of the track, may also see plenty of action in this event. Ben Calder is the man to watch in the 600, he's hot!

In the weights, McMahon, Beardsley, Berne, and Toms are doing fine shot putting. These men ought to place in the money next winter. The team as a whole is fairly well balanced in all events and, with hard work, should taste sweet victory when the last race is run.
